ED PAULEY SAYS
'I CANNOT NOW
CONSIDER' GETTING OUT OF THE FIGHT

Nominee Declares 'I Intend to Stay in This and Vindicate My Character. Because I Know I Am Right.'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (UP)—Edwin W. Pauley told the Senate Naval Affairs Committee today he "cannot now consider" a suggestion that he withdraw his name for Under Secretary of the Navy.

Pauley made his statement in response to a suggestion two days ago by Senator Leverett Saltonstall (Rep., Massachusetts), that he withdraw if the committee clear him of various charges made during current hearings.

"My record, my character and my integrity have been—and still are being—smeared by scurrilous and unwarranted attacks," Pauley declared.

"I intend to stay in this and vindicate my character—because I know I am right."

When Saltonstall made the suggestion earlier this week, Pauley said that he would take it under advisement.

He delivered his answer today in this brief statement.

"Senator Saltonstall—the other day you asked me if, as a patriotic gesture, I would consider withdrawing my name upon the condition that I personally would be exonerated by the committee."

"I have paid particular attention to your request because you have been extremely patient, attentive and fair at all of these hearings, which I know have been tedious for you—as, at times, they have been for many of us."

"Your attitude throughout clearly has indicated that you have not approached this matter on a partisan basis—nor have you prejudged the facts."

"Nevertheless, in fairness to myself and others concerned, I cannot now consider such a step. My record, my character and my integrity have been—and still are being—smeared by scurrilous and unwarranted attacks."

"I intend to stay in this and vindicate my character—because I know I am right."

TYDINGS FAILS TO SHAKE STORY

By EDWARD A. HARRIS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—Francis Tydings, Democrat, failed to break down the testimony of John A. Smith of Los Angeles, who swore that Edwin W. Pauley switched sides on a California oil bill after Standard Oil Co. of California bought assets of Pauley's Petrol Oil Corp., failed today amid sharp clashes in the Senate Naval Affairs Committee.

Smith, president of the Independent Petroleum and Consumers' Association, said he had been warned by Norman Littell, former Department of Justice official, that Pauley was a traitor.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)—HAROLD L. ICKES, the "old newspaper columnist," today turned "newspaper columnist."

The recent Secretary of the Interior signed up with the New York Post syndicate at a price which a syndicate official said placed him among the highest-paid columnists in the country.

ICKES' column will appear three times a week, the syndicate announced, with his maiden effort April 1. His work will appear in various newspapers throughout the country.

In St. Louis ICKES' column will appear exclusively in the Post-Dispatch.

JUDGE MOORE SEES FOR HIMSELF IN
EVICION DISPUTE

United States District Judge George H. Moore left his bench this morning and paid a visit to the Federal Commerce Trust Building, 208 North Broadway, to get first-hand evidence on complaints of tenants who are being evicted so that the building can be remodeled for the Veterans' Administration.

After viewing the building, questioning employees and hearing further arguments from both sides in the controversy, Judge Moore announced from the bench that he would order the eviction date extended until April 15, but that he would issue no order hindering continuation of the extensive alterations now under way.

Several lawyer-tenants had filed motions seeking the extension and asking that workmen in the building be restrained from creating "intolerable" working conditions in the rooms still occupied. Dust and noise made it virtually impossible to conduct business, the lawyers said, adding that they were unable to move on such short notice until other quarters were ready.

Judge Moore said he had been assured by workmen at the building that they could continue their activities with minimum nuisance. Tenants were given until tomorrow to vacate after the building was taken over by the Government Jan. 16. Some tenants already have moved. Most of those remaining obtained extension until April 1.

The building housed the Hawkinson Tread Tire Service Co. Fifteen fire companies responded to three calls.

Non-Stop St. Louis-to-Washington Flights Soon in 4-Engine Planes

Daily non-stop flights to Washington and swifter commercial air transportation to New York and Miami in 56-passenger, four-engine planes will be available to St. Louisans within a few months.

Twenty new Douglas DC-4 "Skymaster" planes, originally intended for the Army Air Transport Command, have been purchased by Eastern Air Lines, Inc., and are being converted for civilian travel, William L. Morrisette, St. Louis district manager for the airline, said today.

"A few of these planes will be used for the St. Louis to Washington and New York run and the St. Louis-Miami flight," Morrisette said.

"They will have a cruising speed of 225 miles an hour as compared to the 180-mile speed of our twin-engine airliners, which will really trim down flying time. We're even going to have a non-stop flight to Washington, eliminating the present stop-overs at Evansville and Louisville."

Morrisette said it was expected that the flight time from here to Washington would be reduced from its present schedule of five hours and 30 minutes to three hours and 25 minutes in the new airliners. The trip to New York, now taking six hours and 37 minutes, would be five hours flat, Morrisette said, and the present schedule of nine hours and 30 minutes to Miami would be cut to about six hours flying time.

"It's certainly going to speed things up, but air-minded travelers will be in for more of a surprise next autumn," Morrisette said.

"Eastern Air Lines has contracted for 20 new Lockheed Constellation airliners with a 300-mile-an-hour cruising speed. You can imagine what that will do to present flight schedules."

5 FIREMEN HURT
AS ROOF, PART OF WALL COLLAPSE

One Reported in Serious Condition—15 Companies Fight Tire Plant Fire at 1119 N. Twelfth.

Five firemen were injured, one seriously, when the roof and part of the wall of a burning building at 1119 North Twelfth street collapsed and partly buried them shortly after noon today.

They were rescued by other firemen who dug in the debris despite flames and the danger of tottering walls which threatened to cave in momentarily.

The injured, taken to City Hospital, were: William T. Rone, sprained back and knees, condition serious; Russ Watson, 2824 Kaskaskia street, cuts and bruises; Charles Oliver, 5720 Reber place, sprained finger and ankle; Joseph DeBousek, 1762 Missouri avenue, sprained ankle and bruised knee; and Capt. Adolf Schmitz, 4923 Theodore avenue, scalp lacerations and first degree burns of right hand.

On Roof When It Fell, Rone told a Post-Dispatch reporter he was on the roof in the rear of the story-and-a-half, garage-type brick building when it gave way. He said the last he remembered was leaping for a wall.

Schmitz and Oliver were holding a hose nozzle just inside the rear door and Watson and DeBousek were in the alley outside the door when the roof and part of the wall came down on them. Rone was buried completely and the others partly covered by bricks and debris.

Capt. Schmitz, DeBousek and Oliver, all of Engine Company 29, and Watson, Hook and Ladder Company 13, were discharged after treatment. Rone, attached to Hook and Ladder Company 7, remained at the hospital.

The building housed the Hawkinson Tread Tire Service Co. Fifteen fire companies responded to three calls.

1500 MARKETS
LIKELY TO CLOSE
AFTER 35 PACKING
PLANTS SUSPEND

Retailers to Issue Circulars to Explain Situation to Customers and Urge Protest on OPA Regulations.

About 1500 independently operated meat markets in the St. Louis area may be forced to close as a result of the scheduled suspension of operations by 35 small beef slaughtering firms at the close of business today in protest against government regulations under which the packers contend they can not operate profitably.

Meat supplies already are short, many markets reporting they have little or no fresh meat on hand and some with only a one or two day supply. The 35 firms that plan to close supply an estimated 75 per cent of the city's beef, and the result of their closing would be reflected in barren display cases in 48 hours, retailers said.

Joseph W. Stevens, field secretary of the Individual Retail Grocers' and Meat Dealers' Association, in estimating the effect of the threatened shutdown, said that much of the independent dealers' meat supplies will be cut off.

To Explain to Customers. Nearly 300 members of the association, meeting last night at the St. Louis House, authorized the printing of 100,000 handbills for distribution to customers to explain the dealers' plight and ask consumers to protest to their congressmen about OPA regulations.

Stevens told the meeting that one packer who will close his plant had offered to operate as a "custom packer" with a group of retailers contracting with him to act as the group's agent in buying cattle and processing meat.

"A retail meat dealer cannot operate at a profit under such an arrangement," Stevens said. "The packer would get from 4 to 7 cents a pound more for meat, but the retailer would get no increase."

Stevens asserted that packers had treated unfairly veterans who had opened stores, in that meat has been supplied to established retailers without consideration for such veterans. As a result, he said, the association often had to "borrow" meat supplies from established stores to enable the veterans to operate meat departments.

Those attending the meeting approved a statement by Stevens that it is almost impossible to buy fresh produce on the wholesale market at prices that allow retailers to sell at the OPA ceiling.

Meanwhile, preparations went ahead by the 35 small beef slaughtering firms to shut down indefinitely. Max W. Kramer, attorney for the Missouri Illinois Small Slaughter Association, said:

"Nothing has occurred to alter our plans," he said. "We have received no reply from the Office of Price Administration in Washington to our invitation to send a representative to our meeting tomorrow."

The association will sponsor a meeting at 2 p.m. tomorrow at Hotel Jefferson to which more than 100 small slaughterers from 15 states have been invited, to join in the protest movement.

The St. Louis Star-Times announced today that it has become an associate member of the Associated Press, which is a member of the Associated Press (AP) accordingly will appear in the Star-Times as well as in the Post-Dispatch.

Formerly and for the last 45 years, the AP dispatches have appeared in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The change is due to the recent decision of the Supreme Court in an anti-trust case growing out of the desire of Marshall Field to obtain the AP dispatches for his recently established newspaper the Chicago Sun.

The Post-Dispatch will henceforth supplement the Associated Press news with the dispatches of the two other press associations—the United Press and the International News Service.

JACKSON DEMANDS COURT
CONVICT SIX NAZI GROUPS

TO PLENTY, SAYS CPA CHIEF

Small Asserts Quick Application of Plan Is Needed—'We've Got to Get These Strikes Settled.'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)—The way to put America on the road to peak production is "fast, very fast" application of the government's new wage-price policy, John D. Small, civilian production administrator, said today. "We've got to get these strikes settled and we've got to get people willing to produce," he told a reporter.

The new stabilization formula will accomplish this, Small added, if the full measure of wage and price-help it allows is meted out speedily to labor and management.

The CPA chief called for quick application of the policy after reporting that the nation's industrial production is at the lowest point since spring of 1941 because of strikes.

Small released his monthly production review after the Senate gave the CPA rough handling yesterday by slashing $750,000 from a bill to give it $1,500,000 of extra operating funds. Despite an administration plea the cut could cripple the national housing program, the Senate voted it by a 44-30 margin.

OPA got similar treatment. The Senate, by a 45-to-25 vote, lopped $927,000 from its proposed $1,854,000 extra appropriation, heedless of arguments that the reduction would sabotage the price control battle against inflation.

In reporting on the production outlook Small said last night that there will be a further decline before things get better but that once wage-price problems are solved "steady and rather rapid gains may be anticipated."

He agreed with Stabilization Director Chester Bowles that it may be necessary to restore some wartime production controls in order to assure a "satisfactory volume of low and medium-priced goods."

But he added:

"It is recognized that neither production nor distribution controls can succeed without hampering production unless they are accompanied by fair and equitable prices."

Such controls, Small contended, can be used "to force increased production of one thing at the expense of decreasing production of something else."

Small's report on January production was not entirely on the pessimistic side. He said that despite strikes there had been increased output of automobiles, nylon hosiery, men's shirts, tires, trucks, radios and sewing machines.

On the other hand work stoppages were reported in the steel, rubber and coal industries.

FRENCH ACCEPT
U. S. PROPOSAL
ON FRANCO ISSUE

British Also Said to Agree In Principle On Plan For 3-Power Policy Declaration.

By RALPH HEINZEN
WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (UP)—The French embassy said today France has accepted a United States proposal for a joint three-power statement aimed at hastening the downfall of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's government in Spain.

The embassy said the State Department has been notified of the French agreement in principle.

Diplomatic officials in close touch with the situation said the British Government likewise had decided to accept the proposals in principle.

The American note was understood to call for publication of a joint statement based on these principal declarations:

1. The United States, Britain and France disapprove of a continuation of relations with Franco's Government and prefer that it be replaced.

2. The three governments favor Franco's replacement by a broadly representative interim "caretaker" government which would remain in power until the Spanish people, through free elections, decide the type of government they want.

3. Any action to oust Franco must come from the Spanish people themselves. The three governments have no intention of imposing a government on Spain.

Bills U. S. for Loss of Clothing

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Feb. 28 (UP)—A former Marine Corps officer, informed that he owed the Government $17.85 for equipment lost when he was evacuated from battle on a stretcher, replied to the corps today that it owed him three seabags of clothing lost in service and suggested they call it even.

Maurice Savage, who returned to the staff of the San Diego Union after four years with the marines, was dunned for the articles left behind when he was removed from two in a pair of borrowed pajamas while unconscious.

Among the items listed as missing were a mess kit, map case, canteen, helmet, gas mask, first aid packet, clothing roll and a whistle.

Savage, who led a platoon through the Marianas and Iwo campaigns and was wounded twice, answered:

"Wounded and evacuated from both Saipan and Iwo, I was unable to keep possession of the charged equipment because (1) I was unconscious at the time; and (2) orders from the commanding general were for the retention of all casualties' equipment for continued use as replacement material.

"As a matter of fact when I disembarked at Guam for hospitalization after the Iwo campaign, I was in possession of one (1) pair of pajama pants. Government issued (slightly worn), contributed by the U.S.S. Pickens' personnel in order to retain some semblance of modesty."

"Further, I am interested in learning why the quartermaster corps makes no effort to recover an individual's property lost during an operation."

"Having lost a seabag with personal clothing in each of the Roraima, Saipan and Iwo operations, I found the re-outfitting procedure an expensive one."

JUSTICE ASSERTS NESTS FOR NEXT
WAR WILL REMAIN
IF THEY ESCAPE

American Opens Arguments to Make Individuals of General Staff and Other Units Liable for Trial.

By NOLAN NORGAARD
NUERNBERG, Feb. 28 (AP)—Chief United States Prosecutor Robert H. Jackson demanded today that the international military tribunal convict on war crimes charges six indicted Nazi groups with an aggregate membership exceeding 2,000,000.

"The next war and the next pogroms will be hatched in the nests of these organizations," he said, if they escape punishment.

"It would be a greater catastrophe to acquit these organizations than it would be to acquit the entire 22 individual defendants," Justice Jackson declared in opening the prosecution's argument on legal and technical questions involved in the trials of the groups.

Conviction of the organizations as criminal groups would not automatically convict their individual members but would establish a legal basis for trial of the underlings, he said.

Jackson lists organizations.

Jackson demanded that the scope of criminality within the indicted organizations be adjudged to embrace the following:

1. All members of the Nazi Leadership Corps, down to and including block leaders, an estimated 600,000 persons.

2. The Reich Cabinet, 40 persons.

3. All S.S. (Elite Guard) men, 400,000.

4. All S.A. (Storm Troop) men, 1,000,000.

5. All Gestapo personnel, except clerks and janitors, 40,000.

6. The entire General Staff and High Command, 115 officers.

The Allied prosecution estimated that of this number about 1,000,000 persons would be made liable for trial if the groups are convicted since the total would be halved by deaths and duplications. Jackson said 45,000 petitions for hearings had been received from members of the organizations following circulation of 200,000 notices in prison camps.

Defense Disputes Figures.

Sharply differing with Jackson's estimates, counsel for the Reich cabinet told the tribunal more than 7,000,000 men—roughly one-third of the total adult male population of Germany—would be outlawed as criminals if the six organizations were convicted.

He said the S.A. and Nazi Leadership Corps alone totaled possibly 6,500,000 and the S.S. would add hundreds of thousands of others.

The defense based its estimate on the large turnover in each organization. It said that at the outbreak of the war the S.A. probably had 2,500,000 members but possibly 2,000,000 more previously had been members. The Nazi Leadership Corps totaled 600,000 to 700,000, the defense contended, but in this organization, too, there had been two or three complete turnovers.

The defense also raised the point that "these organizations named by the military government, solved by the military government. They are non-existent."

Jackson Urges Punishment.

Jackson told the court in a voice tinged with scorn:

"Some concern has been expressed as to the number of persons who might be affected by the declarations of criminality we have asked. Some people seem more susceptible to the shock of a million punishments than to the shock

SAFE WAY TO USE DEADLY NEW RAT POISON REPORTED BY EXTERMINATOR

Hundreds of Rodents Killed at National Stockyards by Chemical 1080—Special Containers Utilized.

(Pictures in Everyday Magazine)

One highly effective way of dealing with the rat problem is being demonstrated at National Stockyards, where hundreds of the pests have been killed in the last three weeks by use of the new rodenticide, known as Chemical 1080, or sodium fluoroacetate.

The East Side rat control program is under direction of George Schierbaum, a professional rat exterminator, who is under contract with the Hunter Packing Co. for execution of the program.

Effectiveness of sodium fluoroacetate as a rat poison was discovered in the war by the National Defense Research Committee. It is fatal, however, to other animals and to human beings and for this reason its use until recently was supervised by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service and the Public Health Service.

Schierbaum, who lives at 4103 Castleman avenue and has had 15 years' experience in pest extermination, told the Post-Dispatch his technique has proved the chemical can be used safely, without loss of effectiveness.

Explanation of Method.
The method devised by Schierbaum is to place the poison, in liquid form, in a saucer inside a heavy wooden box with a hinged, locked lid and a hole in the lid large enough for a rat to enter. Each box is numbered and labeled in large letters, "Poison, Rat Control, Hands Off." He has placed about 60 of the boxes along the outside wall of the packing plant and in a nearby refuse dump.

"The morning after the first day we put the boxes out, we found as many as 11 rats around one box," Schierbaum said. "We have found at least 350 dead rats since the boxes since the program started, which means that many hundreds of others have returned to their burrows to die. The poison seems to have a lure for the rats, but after a taste of it the rats usually die in a few days before he can move 10 feet."

The product is manufactured by Monsanto Chemical Co. at its Aniston (Ala.) plant. The company now sells the chemical to professional exterminators, public health agencies, subject, however, to agreements calling for extreme care in its use.

City Plans to Use 1080.
John Buxell, chief engineer of the sanitation division of the city's Health Division, told the Post-Dispatch his office is planning to use the chemical inside buildings, chiefly in the business area. He acknowledged that it was extremely effective, but said the sodium cyanide, now in use, is superior for killing rats in their burrows, as it also kills fleas and other parasites carried by the animals.

Not Utes Enforcement.
Comptroller Louis Nolte, in a discussion of rat control today at a meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, declared that more rigid enforcement by police of existing sanitation ordinances would go far toward achieving effective rat control.

He described a condition he observed this morning in an alley west of Broadway, in the 2400 block north, in which tenants carelessly threw garbage, loosely wrapped in paper, into ashpits, although landlords had provided garbage pails inside wooden boxes with lids.

Sixteen instances of rat infestation of homes in one district of St. Louis were called to the attention of Mayor Aloys P. Kaufmann in a letter sent yesterday by the Rev. Carl C. Raschke, superintendent of Caroline Mission. The letter was sent following a meeting of the South Side Inter-Agency Council in which the council decided to support formation of a municipal central control division to combat rats.

In one case listed, a teen-age girl awoke in the night in her home and found a rat biting her, the letter said. The animal would not loosen its grip until the girl beat it with her fists. In another, a mother turned on a light and found two rats on the cover of her baby's bed.

"Central Control Imperative."
"We feel that a central control division is imperative due to the ineffectiveness that is apparent in the city department which are now responsible for the program of rat elimination," the Rev. Mr. Raschke's letter said.

"We speak not only as citizens who desire to be justly proud of our community, but also as professional people in settlement house, social welfare and church agencies. We know of the struggles of many people who have the problem of rat infestation within their homes, and who are helpless to counteract effectively the overwhelming number of rats which make up the infestation."

The Rev. Mr. Raschke is chairman of a special committee of the council, appointed to study the rat

Ouster Demand by CIO in Row Over Red Cross Personnel Policy

Dismissal of Persons Responsible for Practices Sought—Union Asks Members to Withhold Contributions.

A demand that those responsible for personnel practices at the St. Louis chapter of the American Red Cross be dismissed was presented to a group of members of the board of directors of the chapter today by Oscar A. Ehrhardt, secretary of the CIO St. Louis Industrial Union Council.

Ehrhardt met with board members following action last night by the central CIO body requesting that all CIO members in the St. Louis area withhold contributions to the Red Cross campaign until charges against the chapter are investigated and clarified. Kenneth H. Bitting, chapter chairman, said the meeting with Ehrhardt today "did not constitute an official session of the executive committee of the Red Cross chapter," and that that no action could be taken until such an "official meeting" was held, probably later this week.

The CIO body asked that the investigation be conducted by the Social Planning Council. Rudolph T. Danstedt, executive director of the Planning Council, said he would present this request to his executive committee within the next few days.

Investigations Under Way.
Investigations already are under way by the American Association of Social Workers and by the CIO United Office and Professional Workers Union, following the resignation of Mrs. Marguerite Nordman, director of the Red Cross home service department since 1927. Mrs. Nordman told the Post-Dispatch she resigned because of interference in her department, including the discharge of LaVerne Oehler, a supervisor in the home service department, for union activities.

Named in Discussion at the Industrial Union Council meeting last night and by Mrs. Nordman was Miss Lucille Sullivan, manager of the Red Cross chapter here. Mrs. Nordman said she was told by Miss Sullivan to let Mrs. Oehler resign to see her husband, an Army captain, but not to tell her she would not be re-hired when she returned. Miss Sullivan denies this.

Mrs. Oehler revealed at the meeting last night that she had applied for her job back again yesterday, but that Miss Sullivan had refused to re-employ her.

WEAPONS FOUND IN PARKED CAR; TWO SAILORS' ARRESTED

Police today arrested two sailors after finding a submachinegun, an automatic pistol and ammunition in their automobile, parked in front of the Downtown Y.M.C.A., 1528 Locust street.

The pair, who said they were Kenneth W. Conner, 21 years old, and Norman R. Fish Jr., 22, both stationed in California, told officers they were on furlough and were driving to Conner's home in Indiana and to Fish's home in Connecticut. Fish said he bought the machinegun for $50 from another sailor and had borrowed the pistol. Both were held for investigation.

VANDALISM WARRANTS SOUGHT FOR 10 COLLEGE STUDENTS

Warrants were sought today charging 10 youths preparing to study for the priesthood with malicious destruction of property in a warehouse on Dougherty road, a mile west of Ballas road, on the basis of an affidavit turned over to the County Prosecuting Attorney's office yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Henry Nickels.

The youths, students at St. Joseph's College, 805 South Geyer road, Kirkwood, were taken into custody Tuesday by Nickels when he said he observed them kicking

STRIKERS, POLICE IN VIOLENT CLASH IN PHILADELPHIA

Workers March on City Hall Demanding Audience With Mayor—Traffic Halted.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28 (AP)—Striking General Electric Co. workers and sympathizers, driven from the streets around the plant in a free-for-all battle with police, marched on city hall today, virtually halting traffic while they demanded an audience with Mayor Bernard Samuel.

In the clash this morning, 3000 marchers broke through police lines three blocks from the plant, bowing over six officers on motorcycles before 18 mounted policemen rode into their ranks and routed the men and women. Twenty or more were injured and 15 arrested on charges of inciting to riot.

Pickets marched around city hall for an hour and blocked street cars ringed the building almost solidly for 20 minutes. After a union delegation had seen the mayor the crowd began to disperse.

Police estimated the paraders numbered 3000 to 5000. They were led in the 55-block march from the plant by CIO Electrical Workers' Union leaders who sought to protest against what they termed "police brutality."

There had been a clash yesterday in which pickets fought police enforcing an injunction prohibiting mass picketing at the plant. Police have been ordered to break up all gatherings of workers within six blocks of the plant, strikebound since Jan. 15. Ten union leaders face contempt charges for allegedly ordering strikers to defy the injunction.

Police reported they found more than 800 marbles—the kind boys play with—near the plant. They said they thought the marbles were scattered on the street so that horses ridden by police would slip and fall. Several horses fell but none was injured.

WARRANT ORDERED REISSUED IN CONCEALED WEAPON CASE

Assistant Circuit Attorney Harry A. Levi, who last Feb. 13 not crossed a warrant charging Tom Pettes Jr. with carrying a concealed weapon, today was ordered to reissue the warrant by Circuit Attorney James W. Griffin.

Pettes, 22 years old, who gave an address in the 2700 block of Caroline street, was arrested Jan. 9 by Patrolman John Luecken and Special Officer Russell Kettler. The special officer searched Pettes at police headquarters and found a knife with a 6½-inch blade in his pocket, Luecken reported.

At a preliminary hearing before Judge David W. Fitzgibbon in the Court of Criminal Justice, Levi announced he was dropping the charge because the officer who had searched the prisoner was dead. Griffin ordered the warrant reissued to let the court decide whether the evidence of the other policeman was admissible.

WIFE SUES T. E. GALLAGHER

Suit to divorce Thomas E. Gallagher, 205 South Skinner boulevard, was filed in St. Louis County Circuit Court today by Jean Hopkins Gallagher, who alleged general indignities. Mrs. Gallagher is asking for custody of their son, Michael Edward, 3 years old.

The Gallaghers were married in June 1935 and separated last May. Mrs. Gallagher has since been living with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Hopkins, 9119 Clayton road, Ladue. Gallagher was recently discharged from the Navy.

GLENNON SPEAKS TO ST. LOUIS FROM CHURCH IN ROME

Large Audience at Cathedral Hears Him Compare Mosaics Here With Those in Italy.

John Cardinal Glennon, Archbishop of St. Louis, in his 10-minute sermon taking possession of his titular church, ancient San Clemente, in Rome today, addressed the people of St. Louis as well as his immediate hearers. He declared St. Louis "the Rome of the West," and compared the mosaics of St. Louis Cathedral with those in Roman churches, particularly those of San Clemente, or St. Clement's.

A large gathering in St. Louis Cathedral heard the Cardinal's sermon, which was broadcast from Rome by Station KMOX.

"My dear people of St. Louis," the Cardinal began. "I mention you first because you are farthest away and are listening to me, since you are unable to be here in the titular church to which I am appointed by the Holy Father."

"Two thoughts occur and remain with me—gratitude to our Holy Father, the Pope, for nominating me to this beautiful church, after the high honor of placing me in the Senate of the Holy Church."

"The other thought is of the beauty that becometh the House of the Lord. This church is replete with mosaic, and that appeals to me because in the Cathedral of St. Louis, where you are now listening to me, two or three million dollars have been spent on mosaic, and we are not done. Mosaic is frozen painting. It will remain when the work of the brush has faded. It will endure like Holy Church, never growing old."

Gothic Versus Roman.
"Mosaics are like to the sky above, filled with light here and shadow there. In fact, mosaics are the necessary complement of the Roman church, the Roman style. While the Gothic is a beautiful style, it appears to be its purpose to lift the people up to God. On the contrary, the Roman style, by the divine, instead of lifting our hearts up to God in heaven, endeavor to bring Him down to earth. 'This is an organization of the house of God upon earth and the Scriptures sustain that purpose, too, because it is said that the Church of God is beautiful and cannot be made too beautiful, and that He dwelleth with us and that He lives with us, and therefore to build for Him an habitation by building a beautiful church is eminently proper. This beauty we must bring down from the skies to make a temple of God on earth."

"Third beautiful church is associated with the Dominican Fathers. It is now 60 or 70 years ago that I had the pleasure of knowing one who represented the splendor of the Dominican Order, Father Tom Burke. Wherever he went, the people clamored to have him. He was a beautiful church, then as now, the world was growing dark, and they needed Father Burke's teaching of Christ, of the Church, of His cross, of eternity. I am glad to have this ancient memory of mine refreshed by companionship with our devoted brothers of St. Dominic. The Dominicans are missionaries."

"United in Service."
"With St. Louis, the Rome of the West, in the Rome of the East, which is Rome indeed, are united in faith, love and service of the world, not merely of our little congregations here and in St. Louis, but of the great congregation, omnes gentes (all peoples), of which I hope the Dominican Fathers will be the forerunners. 'I am glad to be with you today, and thank you for the large crowd from the city of Rome, for the reverend fathers, priests, bishops and archbishops who have come to pray at this shrine. We shall invoke our heavenly patron to guide us onward to safety, serenity, peace for all the world, and blessings to mankind coming from God. May God bless you all!'"

Assistants in Ceremony.
The St. Louis prelate was assisted in the ceremony by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John P. Cody, chancellor of the Archdiocese of St. Louis; Bishop James A. Griffin of Springfield, Ill.; and the Cardinal's nephew, the Rev. Philip O'Connor of St. Louis.

Following an outline prescribed for centuries, an elaborate religious ritual preceded the final signing of a legal deed, the Cardinal's document of possession.

CITY BUDGET HEAD URGES CUT IN FUNDS OFFICES REQUESTED

Amounts Sought by Departments Exceed Appropriations for Current Year by $3,589,000, Schubkegel Says.

Huge reductions in departmental requests for operating expenditures for the city's next fiscal year were recommended to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment today by Budget Director E. G. Schubkegel.

Departmental requests for the next fiscal year, beginning in April, exceed by $3,589,000 the appropriations made for the current year, Schubkegel said. The only reason that the city was able to balance its budget this year, he asserted, was because of an accumulated surplus of $3,145,000 from previous years.

City departments have requested $30,336,000 for operating expenses. Appropriations for this year totaled $26,746,000. The Budget Director's compilation of requests figured the Police Department on the same basis as for this fiscal year. This department has not yet made its request for next fiscal year. Actually, it is expected to be increased by $500,000 over the appropriation of $5,688,000 received for this year.

Exceeded Estimated Receipts.
Appropriations for this fiscal year, exceeded estimated receipts by $2,578,000, using up a substantial portion of the previous surplus. Estimated receipts for next year will be around $24,000,000. Unexpended appropriations for this year plus the remainder of the earlier surplus will make a total of about $25,000,000 available to meet the departmental requests for $30,336,000, Schubkegel said.

"In order to retain the city's strong financial position," Schubkegel stated, "the Board of Estimate and Apportionment must formulate a definite policy authorizing a budget sufficiently low to permit a balance with income and to provide an emergency surplus. Deficit spending cannot be tolerated when the city is facing a $43,000,000 postwar bond program. St. Louis must maintain its enviable credit rating."

Accurate estimates of revenue for the next fiscal year are impossible at the present time, the budget director said, because of changes in assessment dates and methods under the new State Constitution. The city's assessed valuations will not be completed until April 1. Revenue may amount to $24,000,000, he said, compared with $22,746,000 for last year. The budget does not take into consideration the institution of rubbish and ash collection. Funds for this purpose would have to be obtained, Schubkegel said.

Part Sought for Salary Hikes.
The request for the largest increase in operating expenditures came from the Department of Public Welfare which seeks $10,156,000 for the new fiscal year, as compared to an appropriation of $8,164,000 for the year now coming to a close. About $1,636,000 of the department's $1,991,000 requested increase is for salaries. Both increased salaries and an increased number of employees are involved, as compared to the current year. This is true in most departments. About $2,763,000 of the $3,589,000 requested increases for all departments are for salaries.

The Public Welfare Department's increased requests reflect the increased patient load at the city's institutions. Salaries of the institutional workers were greatly increased but a large number of additional employees were also required at each place.

For operating City Hospital, $2,081,000 is requested as compared to $1,617,000 appropriated for this year. Respective requests for next year and appropriations for this year for other institutions are: Infirmary, $578,000 and $802,000; Koch Hospital, $602,000 and $791,000; Sanitarium, $1,259,000 and $1,537,000; Homer G. Phillips Hospital, $1,130,000 and $1,398,000.

The Department of Streets and Sewers asked for $2,855,000 for the new fiscal year, compared to an appropriation of $2,497,000 for this year. Of the $357,000 requested increase, $271,000 is for salaries.

Safety Department Seeks More.
The Department of Public Safety, which includes the Fire Department, requested $3,360,000 compared to this year's appropriation of $3,077,000. Of the requested $283,000 increase, $212,000 is for salaries. The Fire Department's portion of the request was for $2,584,000, an increase of $184,000. Requested increases in the salary budget for the Fire Department was $161,000.

Removal of the Army war bond office from Chicago to the St. Louis Administration Center, 4300 Goodfellow boulevard, tomorrow will require the hiring of about 450 persons, most of whom are expected to be obtained in St. Louis, officials of the Central Field Fiscal Office at the center said today.

The war bond office, which will come under the command of Col. W. T. Johnson, director of the fiscal office, issues war bonds to Army and War Department personnel on duty outside the continental limits of the United States. At the peak of Army strength, it issued about 1,500,000 bonds monthly.

ST. LOUIS VETERAN BRANCH TO HIRE 500 EMPLOYEES

Preference on New Project to Be Given Disabled Service Men—Clerks Needed.

More than 500 persons will be employed immediately by the Veterans' Administration branch office in St. Louis to staff a new department to handle the service insurance records of an estimated 1,000,000 veterans in a five-state area, B. C. Moore, deputy administrator, announced today.

Employment preference will be given to disabled veterans, veterans and former government employees, in that order, Moore said. The greatest need, he added, is for clerks, clerk-typists and stenographers. The entire staff is to be hired before April 30.

Service insurance records of veterans of Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle, which is the area served by the St. Louis VA office, are now in a central office in New York. They are to be sent here, Moore said, late in May as a part of the administration's program to decentralize and simplify activities.

Moore said the personnel office of the administration had been instructed to obtain new employees with general clerical or administrative experience. A large number of the new workers, he stated, would be sent to New York for advance training in the handling of insurance records.

Most of the clerical positions will fall in the $1902 annual salary class, with the largest group coming under the $1704 salary bracket. He explained that like all other Federal positions at this time, the new jobs will be on a "temporary-indefinite" basis. Employees will be given opportunity to take civil service examinations for permanent civil service employment.

Application forms may be obtained at post offices, in the Federal Building and at the Veterans' Administration personnel office, room 640, Boatmen's Bank Building, 314 North Broadway.

19 MEN ARRESTED, FIREARMS SEIZED IN CAB UNION ROW

Police Act to Avert War- fare Over CIO Effort to Organize Drivers of Famous Cab Co.

With the arrest of 19 men and the seizure of a stock of firearms police were hopeful today that they had averted open warfare among Negro taxicab drivers, growing out of the efforts of Local 22 of the CIO United Service Employees' Union to organize drivers for the Famous Cab Co.

Officers began picking up 14 shotguns, rifles, automatic pistols and revolvers in a series of arrests and searches which began late yesterday afternoon and continued until early today.

The trouble started at 4 p.m. yesterday when four pickets of Local 22 appeared in front of a filling station at 4405 Page boulevard, headquarters of the Famous Cab Co. Police summoned to the scene, broke up a minor melee, and were informed by Fred Richardson, owner of the Famous Cab Co., that his 21 drivers were members of Local 1325. Richardson said Local 1325 is affiliated with the CIO, but CIO officers say it is unknown to them.

"There Might Be Trouble," Art Chapin, business agent of Local 22, who was on the picket line, told the officers that his union was trying to organize Richardson's drivers, and he was quoted as warning that "there might be trouble."

An hour after the first report was received officers arrested in an automobile in front of 3810 Page boulevard John Monroe, who said he is president of Local 1325, after they found a loaded automatic pistol tucked into the rear seat of the machine. Monroe, booked suspected of having a concealed weapon, denied ownership of the pistol.

Meanwhile, Clifton Jackson, driver of a DeLuxe cab, reported that four or five shots were fired at his cab from a speeding sedan occupied by Negroes at Cook avenue and Sarah street. The shots went wild. Jackson reported a license number for the sedan, which was traced to Richardson. The machine was found on a grease rack at the Famous Cab's filling station, and policemen stationed there said it had been in the station for about an hour.

Weapons in Cab. Early last night detectives halted a Famous taxi in the 4300 block of Cozens avenue, occupied by six of Richardson's drivers. In the machine the officers found a loaded revolver, a loaded automatic pistol and an unloaded pistol. The Negroes, booked for investigation, denied knowing the weapons were in the cab.

Following receipt of telephone calls that firearms were stored at Famous Cab headquarters, detectives went there at 10 p.m. and reported they were met at the door by Richardson, who was armed with a loaded shotgun. A search revealed another loaded shotgun, two loaded rifles, a revolver and 34 shotgun shells. While the officers were in the place two automobiles occupied by Negroes drove up. A search of the machines added another shotgun, a pistol and a revolver to the stock of confiscated weapons. The occupants of the machines were held.

Early today another group of officers made a search of Famous Cab headquarters and picked up a shotgun and a supply of shotgun and pistol ammunition. Drivers of a Blue Jay cab and an automobile, searched during the investigation, were found to have pistols in their machines, and were arrested. Officers arrested also two chauffeurs, one armed with a club, the other with a small knife, who were having an altercation with Fred Richardson Jr., in front of 4230 Easton avenue.

WAGE-PRICE PLAN ROAD TO PLENTY, SAYS CPA CHIEF

pages cut production of refrigerators, electric stoves, washing machines, irons and vacuum cleaners, he reported. He said the effects of the steel strike "will be felt for many weeks to come."

Veteran Senator McKellar (Dem.), Tennessee, left his chair as Senate presiding officer to lead the fight against OPA. He said Congress is tired of wartime controls and agencies that want to extend into peacetime.

Senator Hayden (Dem.), Arizona, trying to stave off the cut, asserted that "if you want to sabotage OPA, if you want to ruin it, the simple way is to cut off the money. That is not my way." He said that it would be unfair to complain about OPA failure if the agency is not given the money it says it needs to do a good job.

More Attacks on OPA.

Senator Hickenlooper (Rep.), Iowa, said:

"There is no more inefficient, no more sprawling, no more stupid organization in the Government than OPA. It is high time to reduce the amount of surplus money with which they have been inflicting themselves on the public. If you do not stop the stupid practices of OPA, you are not going to have reconversion and you are going to have inflation."

Senator Overton (Dem.), Louisiana, said that OPA has more than $28,000,000 to spend and that the $927,000 proposed by the Senate Appropriations Committee "is just $927,000 to much."

Senator Wherry (Rep.), Nebraska, urged that the Senate not allow $927,000 more "to send out gestapo agents to carry out unethical methods of procedures, especially against sugar merchants and grocers."

The Senate voted 44 to 33 to authorize payment of an additional $125,000,000 in Government meat subsidies and $25,000,000 more in flour subsidies.

The additional funds, to be paid by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, will carry the two subsidy programs through June 30. The bill, sent back to the House by voice vote after the subsidies were increased, also extends the Government's right to purchase for resale at a loss, sugar and vegetables processed before July 1, 1946, and flaxseed harvested before that date.

ARGUMENTS HEARD BY ALDERMEN ON DAYLIGHT SAVING

Arguments for and against passage of an ordinance providing for daylight saving time in St. Louis from the fourth Sunday in April to the fourth Sunday in October each year, were presented yesterday at a public hearing by the Legislation Committee of the Board of Aldermen. The bill was taken under advisement.

Speakers for the bill included

Park Commissioner Palmer B. Baumes and Superintendent of Recreation George Thompson, who said that when daylight saving was in effect during the war, playgrounds and parks were crowded by thousands of persons who used the additional daylight for recreation. A broker and a representative of a radio station told of the difficulties encountered in those fields during the summer months, where there is a two-hour time differential between St. Louis and Eastern cities having daylight saving time.

Opponents spoke chiefly of the need for sleep during cool morning hours, which might be lost if clocks were advanced one hour.

Jacob M. Lashly, president, and Martin Collins, vice president, of the Municipal Theater Association, contended much patronage might be lost to the Municipal Opera if clocks were advanced here and not in the surrounding area. Representatives of the motion picture industry also opposed the bill for business reasons.

TRUMAN HOUSING BILL LOSES FIRST TEST, 145 TO 88

House Votes to Terminate On June 30, 1947, Any Emergency Powers It May Grant.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)—The Administration lost today the first test on its housing legislation, as the House voted 145 to 88 to terminate June 30, 1947, any emergency power it may grant for the production of more houses.

The vote came in the face of a declaration by House Democratic Leader McCormack, Massachusetts, that "the most powerful lobby in my time is working against a workable housing bill—against the best interest of the veteran."

Representative Patman (Dem.), Texas, author of the housing bill, told the House "This amendment will scuttle President Truman's program to build houses for veterans."

Administration backers sought to put the date at Dec. 31, 1947, emphasizing that the President's program contemplates construction of 2,700,000 houses by private enterprise in a two-year period. They argued that emergency powers are needed until the end of next year.

The House rejected by a 143 to 29 standing vote a motion by Representative Rankin (Dem.), Mississippi, to kill the bill without further debate. Rankin shouted that the legislation would drive the building industry out of business or into the black market. He proposed to strike out the enacting clause.

Action on Rankin's motion, however, did not indicate the ultimate disposition of the legislation. The opposition who on an argument that the legislative body should not refuse to debate the measure.

The Administration's bill faced possible defeat as support ran strong for a Republican substitute measure. Republicans and some Democrats were lined up behind the substitute legislation sponsored by Representative Wolcott (Rep.), Michigan, which strikes at two key provisions of the administration program. It would deny Truman's request for "anti-speculation" price ceilings on both new and old houses and refuse the $600,000,000 asked for subsidies to encourage larger production of scarce building materials.

Wolcott's bill would create a housing office with broad powers to issue directives to other agencies, including OPA. It would continue for another year government powers on priorities and allocations to channel building materials into home construction. And it would increase by a billion dollars the government authority to insure mortgages on new homes.

The administration program devised by Wyatt is pivoted on the use of subsidies to break the bottlenecks in building materials production.

JACKSON DEMANDS COURT CONVICT SIX NAZI GROUPS

ing conviction of the organizations."

Jackson declared the six organizations were the "nucleus of a new Nazidom" to which members "blind devotion is suspended but not abandoned."

Legal Precedents Cited.

He cited legal precedents from many countries to support his contention that the six groups could be prosecuted and convicted as organizations. Among these were state laws in the United States curbing the Ku Klux Klan and movements advocating the forcible overthrow of an existing government; California's 1919 law on criminal syndicalism; the British India act of 1936 against "thugs" and similar Russian and French enactments.

Jackson contended further that the Weimar Republic's legislation outlawing the Communist party furnished a basic German precedent. He recalled that in 1927 the entire German Communist party was held to be criminal and that the judgment "included every cashier, every employee, every delivery boy and messenger, and every district leader."

The prosecution's case against the 22 individual defendants was completed yesterday.

The tribunal agreed to reconsider its decision of yesterday barring Winston Churchill as a defense witness. Dr. Martin Horn, attorney for Joachim von Ribbentrop, former German foreign minister, reminded the tribunal that he had not yet filed a written brief on the matter, as requested by the tribunal.

MAPLEWOOD TO SELL LAND FOR VETERANS' HOUSING

Property owned by Maplewood will be sold by the city to contractors at a low price for use as building lots for a veterans' housing project, Mayor Frank L. Martini announced last night at a meeting of the Maplewood City Council. The property, on Laclede Station road, near Manchester road, will be divided into 11 lots for the construction of low-cost housing units, which will not exceed $5000 and will be sold to the veterans on easy terms, he said.

Terms of arrangements with contractors, Martini said, will provide that the saving from the purchase of the property at a low price will be passed on to the veterans. Meanwhile, Maplewood will expedite extension of public utilities to areas where the building of veterans' housing units is planned in order to make such units available as soon as possible, he said.

PERMANENT DWELLINGS ONLY FOR UNIVERSITY CITY SITE

Property owners living in the vicinity of the site on which University City proposes to erect emergency housing facilities for veterans were assured last night by Mayor Matt C. Fogarty that only permanent type dwellings would be constructed. The site, which is municipally owned, is along the Terminal Railroad right-of-way near Kempland avenue. The assurance was given at a meeting of the Board of Aldermen after T. J. Koepfen, chairman of the Darstale Improvement Association, said it had been reported to him that the city was considering erecting quonset huts or other types of temporary structures on the six-acre tract.

The Board also adopted a resolution placing on the ballot in the city election April 2 a proposition to increase the park tax from 2 cents on the $100 assessed valuation to 15, and the library tax from 2 to 4 cents.

MVA SUPPORTERS LOOK TO KRUG FOR STRONG BACKING

Former TVA Executive Expected to Favor Plan in New Post as Interior Secretary.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—Julius A. Krug, President Truman's nominee to succeed Harold L. Ickes as Secretary of the Interior, is counted on by persons familiar with his views to be a strong supporter of the proposals for the Missouri Valley Authority and similar authorities in other basins. He has declined to discuss his stand publicly, in advance of the hearing on his nomination set by the Senate Public Lands Committee for next Tuesday. It is expected that he will be questioned then on this and many other fields in which the Department of the Interior is concerned.

Krug's friends understand that he is a believer in the maximum possible decentralization of administration in such undertakings as the control of the water resources of the Missouri valley. This is the principle of the MVA proposal. Such a policy is in direct conflict with the stand of former Secretary Ickes, who sought to have the proposed authorities for the various great river basins of the nation placed under control of his office at Washington.

In a Key Position.
The position Krug takes is of particular importance. As Secretary of the Interior, he will be in charge of the Bureau of Reclamation, one of the principal agencies handling the Pick-Sloan plan for the Missouri. This plan was recognized under the 1944 Flood Control Act and a start has been made to carry it out. The Reclamation Bureau and the Army Corps of Engineers are the outstanding units in the voluntary Missouri Basin Inter-Agency Committee, set up to co-ordinate the work with the army engineers exercising a strong leadership.

Krug is not familiar yet with the operations of the Inter-Agency Committee, it was learned by the Post-Dispatch. From 1938 to 1941 Krug was power engineer, in charge of the important power division of the Tennessee Valley Authority. TVA is the prototype of MVA. It was Krug who carried out the negotiations by which TVA and various towns and co-operatives purchased Tennessee Electric Power Co. from the late Wendell L. Willkie's Commonwealth & Southern Corp. in 1939 for $73,425,000, after five years of bitter dispute.

A Practical Engineer.
Krug left TVA to become manager of power for the old War Production Board—of which he later was chairman—before the MVA idea developed. Consequently his speeches as a TVA official did not reflect his views on MVA. His career has been in the field of business management and consultation; he is a practical engineer, not a professional one. A registered Democrat in Tennessee, Krug is a New Dealer. He was 38 years old last Nov. 23 and, he has told friends, at each presidential election while he was old enough to vote the only candidate who appealed to him, regardless of party, was Franklin D. Roosevelt.

British headquarters at Bombay said today that 250 Indian soldiers who went on strike at Jabalpur in the central provinces yesterday had been rounded up and confined to barracks and that no more troops were striking.

Delay in Trials Prevents Removal Of Old Nugent Store Eyesore

Remains Stand Pending Hearing of Lawsuits
Over Title—Effort to Compromise Tax Claims Reported.

The No. 1 eyesore of downtown St. Louis, the remains of the old Nugent department store, remain standing because of delay in bringing to trial lawsuits over title to the property, lawyers told a Post-Dispatch reporter today.

City officials have heard that efforts might be made to eliminate the city's interest in the half-block site, on the east side of Broadway, between Washington avenue and St. Charles street, by a proposal to compromise the big accumulated taxes. Comptroller Louis Nolte said no action had been taken yet and no definite proposal made. General taxes against the contested property amounted to $251,000 by the end of 1944.

The City claims title to the site through its purchase of benefit judgments against the four separate parcels of land arising from the widening of Delmar boulevard. Owners of the two parcels on the Broadway frontage filed suits in January 1945 to set aside the City's claim.

Trial Next Month Sought.
Assistant City Counselor Sidney R. Edmund said the delay in these cases in circuit court was because the plaintiffs were not ready to proceed. The first trial setting was for last October, but the plaintiffs sought more time, he said. He plans now to request that the suits be brought to trial next month.

Michael J. Hart, representing the plaintiffs, declined to comment on the delay or discuss his clients' intentions. Nolte said the pendency of the suits would interfere with any tax settlement.

One suit was brought by Charles G. De Lury and his son, Jack J. De Lury, as owners of the larger of the two tracts, at the Broadway and St. Charles corner. The other was filed in the name of Miss Kathryn E. Cochrane. Hart said he understood she was a straw party. Orrick Lane Realty Co. has been listed as the owner of the Broadway and Washington corner.

Abstract Not Prepared.
Edmund said that even if the city won the suits its title might not be cleared completely. He explained that an abstract of title has not been prepared and it was not known if there might be some other claim, such as that of a mortgage holder.

The city made an agreement whereby the old and abandoned department store building was to be removed from that part of the site not under contest and to raze all except the first floor of the structure on the Broadway frontage. It was the intention, if the city won, to clear the site entirely and use it for parking automobiles. As the property stands now, however, after a series of demolition operations which began about three years ago, there is a ramshackle one-story structure left along the Washington frontage, occupied by a freak show, a shoe-shine stand, a florist and a souvenir shop. The front wall is left standing to a partial height of four stories on Washington and one-story on Broadway and St. Charles, while the gaunt framework still rises to varying heights.

KEM ANNOUNCES G.O.P. CANDIDACY FOR SENATE SEAT

Kansas City Lawyer As-sails P.A.C. Schwabe
Says He Has Not Yet Made Decision.

By CURTIS A. BETTS
Political Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 28—James P. Kem, Kansas City lawyer, announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for United States Senator today in a statement in which he said he was "unanimously opposed to domination of our Federal Government by any other pressure group."

Kem, who has the support of the important Republican leaders of Kansas City, enters the race in the expectation that the St. Louis Republican organization will follow the Kansas City groups, and with a plan to make an active campaign for support in the rural areas which so far have not evidenced much interest in him.

The Republican primary campaign could easily develop into a city-country fight with Congressman Max Schwabe of Columbia as the likely candidate to oppose Kem. Schwabe said here today that he was giving the subject of filing for the senatorship serious consideration, but had not reached a decision.

"I think that there is no question that I can be renominated and re-elected to Congress in the Second District," Schwabe said. "And while I would like to be senator, I am very well satisfied with my seat in the House of Representatives. I have no desire to get into a factional fight, or a city-country fight, and I have until April 30 to decide. I may make a decision and announcement any day, or I might have nothing to say until near the final filing date."

St. Louis G.O.P. on Fence.
There is a pronounced sentiment among rural Republicans that the nomination should go to the country and that the senatorship should not be controlled by an agreement among Republican leaders in St. Louis and Kansas City. This has led to the belief by some that the fight will be between "the city and the country," but developments might dispel the situation.

While Republican National Committeeman Barak T. Mattingly has indicated a belief that the St. Louis organization would be inclined to follow the Kansas City lead, city organization politicians usually hold themselves in readiness to line up at the last minute with the candidate who appears to have the greater strength.

If Kem should develop strong rural support on top of his Kansas City strength, undoubtedly the St. Louis organization would support him. On the other hand, if Schwabe or some other candidate should appear stronger, he would get their support.

Kem's Statement.
Kem's announcement of candidacy was in rather general terms opposition to "the radical elements in control of the Democratic party," in favor of "real and permanent reduction in government expenses," and encouragement of "efficient production of farm products in quantities to meet all needs."

"I look forward to conditions under honest and able Republican leadership," he said, "when we shall again have a healthy and vigorous industry, including both farm and factory—jobs for their own choosing for those willing and able to work, and adequate care at all times for the aged, infirm and the disabled. The sound and time-tested approach to all this is through the encouragement and re-energizing of free enterprise."

Continuing his statement of opposition to the P.A.C., he said: "I am in favor of collective bargaining between an employer and his employees. I favor a sound employment program which will free workers and management from the shackles of government bureaucracy and arrogant labor racketeers, imposing on their own members and the public alike." Anticipating that he would meet criticism in the campaign because of his connection with oil interests, Kem said that in 1928 as attorney for an independent oil company he instituted a suit which resulted in cancellation of a contract which the late Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall, of Teapot Dome fame, had let for the sale of oil from the Salt Creek field in Wyoming. As a result, Kem said, the oil was sold to competitive bidding with a profit of more than $1,000,000 to the Federal Government.

He said also that as chairman of the Missouri Petroleum Industries committee he had an active part in defeating a proposed increase in the Missouri gasoline tax.

Kem is 56 years old and was born in Marion, Mo. He graduated from Missouri University and from the Harvard Law School. He was chairman of the Jackson County Republican Committee from 1943 to 1944 and as a delegate to the St. Louis Republican national convention served on the Resolutions Committee. He is a trustee of the University of Kansas City, a member of the Episcopal Church, a Mason and a member of the American Legion. He is married and has two daughters.

Hamilton Churchill in U. S. News, Feb. 28 (AP)—Hamilton Churchill, son of former Prime Minister Winston Churchill of England, arrived at Lambert field here early today aboard a Pan American plane from England.

OPA HEAD SAYS LANDLORDS PROSPER UNDER RENT CONTROL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)—Paul A. Porter, new OPA Administrator, said yesterday that landlords have prospered under rent control even though average rents have climbed only 4 per cent above prewar levels.

Porter said landlords' net operating income increased on the average from 35 to 40 per cent between 1939 and 1944, according to an OPA survey in 36 cities.

Preliminary reports for 1945 show, the statement added, that increased income remained "within a fraction of 1 per cent" of the 1944 level. That trend is continuing this year, Porter said.

FATS QUOTAS TO BE REDUCED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)—Supplies of fats and vegetable oils allotted domestic manufacturers of shortening, salad and cooking oils will be reduced about 4.4 per cent beginning April 1 to help this country meet foreign food commitments.

The Agriculture Department said yesterday quotas of such manufacturers will be maintained at 88 per cent of the base period rate of use. Since last October, these users have been receiving an additional quota. The extra quota is being withdrawn. Quotas for the manufacture of margarine will remain unchanged at 95 per cent of 1944 production.

WORKER AT STEEL PLANT KILLED BY SWITCH ENGINE

William Davis, 3041 Ivanhoe avenue, was struck and killed by a Missouri Pacific Railroad switch engine yesterday at a crossing in front of the Scullin Steel Co., 6700 Manchester avenue, where he was employed as chief electrician. Police said Otis Hicks, a watchman employed by the railroad, told them he waved a flag when he saw the engine approaching, but Davis, who was 70 years old, failed to heed his warning. Engineer Herman Hoops, 3665 Rutger street, who was backing the engine at the time, said he did not see Davis.

PMA CONVENTION FOR NEGOTIATIONS TO ENTER CIO

These, However, Are Subject to Approval by Members of Decision to Withdraw From AFL.

By SPENCER R. McCULLOCH
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 28—The executive board of the Progressive Miners of America was empowered today to negotiate for affiliation with the CIO if a referendum of the membership ratifies the decision of a special convention to withdraw from the American Federation of Labor. Its affiliation is regarded as certain.

Authority to seek affiliation with the CIO "if an opportunity presents itself" was voted late yesterday after delegates from local unions throughout Illinois and in Western Kentucky had voiced the fear that John L. Lewis may start a new raiding campaign against the Progressives. The convention was transacting routine business, preparatory to adjournment today.

The resolution authorizing the board to deal with the CIO did not mention that organization by name, but throughout a long debate on the urgency of seeking affiliation it was the only one mentioned. John Marchiondo, President of the Progressives, who introduced the resolution, told the writer that the CIO was the only body to which they could turn. He has not received any indication whether the CIO would welcome them. The PMA executive board may negotiate but any decision would be subject to a referendum. Marchiondo said that a referendum vote would be cast by the membership March 20. Six days will be required to tabulate results, he said.

AFL Council Criticized.
The resolution said that "the executive council of the American Federation of Labor has violated all principles of justice in accepting the application of the United Mine Workers into the AFL."

A proposed resolution to defer action on whether to seek affiliation with the CIO until the annual convention of the Progressives next September was dropped after delegates said that the union might disintegrate during such a "cooling off" period.

Focusing the urgency of action, Felix Goodnick of Belleville, a member of the union's executive board, said that if delay took place "the CIO might say 'we don't want you; there's nothing left of you.'"

A pessimistic picture of the future of the PMA if it should attempt to continue as an independent union, was drawn by Dan McGill of Springfield, one of the leaders of the organization when it was formed by rebellious United Mine Workers in 1932. McGill, who was one of those convicted in the 1937 coal town bombing trial, asserted that if Lewis begins to "corrupt our men" the Progressive leaders might find themselves in the position of a general without an army.

"How Dead" for Union.
McGill said that the AFL executive council had given the Progressives "one of the rawest deals ever dealt a labor organization."

Other speakers expressed similar opinions, some referring to the Lewis subordination of Mine B, here operated by Carl H. Elshoff, which was disclosed exclusively in the Post-Dispatch.

If John L. Lewis paid $250,000 to take over one mine, said Oscar Prestigioni of Collinsville, "how much do you think he is prepared to pay now to take over all the Progressives?"

FILING OF SUITS IN ST. LOUIS ATTRIBUTED TO BIG VERDICTS

"But larger verdicts generally obtainable in United States District Court here have made St. Louis a favorite forum for out-of-town damage suit lawyers was brought out in a deposition of a Minneapolis lawyer filed yesterday in federal court here.

The deposition was taken by Wayne Ely, attorney for the Gulf, Mobile & Ohio Railroad, to support a motion to bar two Minneapolis lawyers from prosecuting a damage suit on behalf of an Illinois client against the railroad for injuries suffered in Illinois. Ely based the motion on the ground that the two attorneys, Robert J. McDonald and William D. De Paro, were not enrolled in United States District Court here and were not members of the Missouri bar.

De Paro admitted in the deposition, taken recently in Chicago, that St. Louis was chosen, among other reasons, because of the larger verdicts returned by juries in this jurisdiction. Ely conceded the right of the attorneys to bring an occasional suit here under the Federal Employers' Liability Act, but argued the rule was being abused in that they now have more than a dozen cases pending here.

ANTI-PETRILLO MEASURES SENT TO JOINT COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)—The Senate referred to a Senate-House committee yesterday the job of reconciling different versions of legislation which sponsors said is aimed at John C. Petrillo, Musicians' Union chief.

A year ago the House passed a bill to forbid interference with the broadcast of commercial, educational and cultural radio programs. This caused Petrillo's action in blocking the broadcast of high school musicians from Interlochen, Mich.

On Feb. 21, 1945, the House passed a much broader bill outlawing the use of force, threat "or other means" to compel radio stations to pay tribute to unions for the use of phonograph records in place of "live musicians." It also forbids employment of more musicians than actually are needed. Senators who will try to reconcile the two measures are Edwin C. Johnson (Dem.), Colorado; Tunnell (Dem.), Delaware; Myers (Dem.), Pennsylvania; White (Rep.), Maine; and Austin (Rep.), Vermont. House members have not been appointed.

NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION URGED BY SENATE GROUPS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)—Senators who have studied the subject for months urged Congress today to act immediately to create a national science foundation as an independent federal agency. Reports to that effect were submitted by military and commerce subcommittees which said the foundation should:

"Promote research in fundamental science, as well as in fields of applied research and development necessary for the national defense, health and welfare." They said a practical necessity for quick action lies in the fact that the wartime Office of Scientific Research and Development is to expire June 30. A bill to create the foundation has been introduced.

MONSANTO DONATES $21,840 TO RED CROSS

10,000 Volunteers to Begin House-to-House Canvass Tomorrow for $1,161,500.

Donation of $21,840 by the Monsanto Chemical Co. to the 1946 Red Cross Fund campaign was announced today by Henry B. Pfleger, chairman of the special gifts division. House-to-house solicitation in the drive to obtain $1,161,500 will be started tomorrow by 10,000 volunteer workers.

Howard V. Stephens, general chairman of the campaign, calling attention to the fact that this is the shortest campaign the Red Cross has conducted in St. Louis, said, "In order to beat our record of achieving the 1945 goal in 19 days, we must have the wholehearted support of every volunteer worker and individual contributor in the city and county." The drive is scheduled to close March 16.

The Washington University campus campaign was opened at a student rally this morning in Memorial Chapel. Howard F. Willis, sales manager of the Lasar Glass & Manufacturing Co., who recently returned after two years' service in the Pacific zone as a Red Cross field director, spoke. He emphasized the importance of Red Cross services to men overseas and described his experiences with the armed forces.

Employees of five additional firms were reported as contributing 100 per cent to the campaign. They were Moss & Lowenhaupt Cigar Co., 1507 Olive street, 29 employees contributed $94.50; Kato Drug Co., 6150 Natural Bridge road, Pine Lawn, 25 employees, $61; Cherry Blossoms Co., 4547 Olive street, five employees, $127; Western Plastic Moulding Corp., 300 North Broadway, 16 employees, $60; and the Warner Jenkinson Manufacturing Co., 2526 Broadway, 12 employees, $226. The staff members of Blair School, 300 Rauschenbach avenue, contributed $76.

VETERANS WHO USED ABSENTEE BALLOTS STILL MUST REGISTER

Soldiers and sailors who voted an absentee ballot while serving in the armed forces are not relieved on their return to civil life from the necessity for registering, Frank Ramacciotti, chairman of the board of election commissioners, said today.

"Many of these men who were not registered voters when they entered service," he said, "are under the false impression that voting an absentee ballot automatically registered them as voters. Many will be deprived of the ballot at the next election unless they register," he said. Ramacciotti also pointed out that many who were registered before they entered service have since been removed from the voters' list by canvassers unable to find them at the addresses given.

TRAFFIC DEATHS SHOW RISE OF 49 PCT. IN JANUARY

CHICAGO, Feb. 28 (UP)—The National Safety Council said today that traffic deaths in the United States rose 49 per cent last month over the same 30-day period a year ago. Three thousand persons were killed in such accidents. This figure was exceeded only by 3159 in 1937 and 3085 in 1942. Traffic fatalities this year will total 38,000 unless the entire nation co-operates in the current accident prevention program, the safety organization warned. The three cities in the more-than-500,000 population group reporting the lowest death tolls in January were St. Louis, Washington and Buffalo, N.Y.

The formula for natural rubber having been fixed by nature, man was limited in changing and improving its compounds.

2. Man changes synthetic rubber to suit his will.

Through the wonders of chemistry, man can design synthetic rubber compounds whose characteristics he can control.

3. Remarkable advances being made in synthetic rubber.

The swift march of science already has produced synthetic tires far superior to wartime varieties. Still better ones are coming.

4. Tells how to know the best tires.

You cannot tell by looks alone whether a tire is manufactured from the latest improved compounds.

5. Latest date—best tire.

So that you can be sure of getting the latest improvements and, therefore, highest tire value, it is vital that you know when your new tire was made.

That's why Dayton puts the date of

HOUSE APPROVES SUBSTITUTE LABOR DEPARTMENT BILL

Measure Differs Radically From Senate Version Consolidating State Agencies.

By ROY F. CARROLL
Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch
JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 28—A Senate bill creating a new Department of Labor and Industrial Relations as part of the reorganization of State executive departments required by the new Constitution, was passed by the House yesterday afternoon.

The measure was so radically changed from the version approved by the Senate, through adoption of a House substitute, that it undoubtedly will go to a joint conference committee of the two houses.

The bill would place in one department the activities of the present Workmen's Compensation Commission, Unemployment Compensation Commission, Bureau of Mines and State Department of Labor and Industrial Inspection, effective July 1, 1946.

Differences in Bills.
As passed by the Senate the bill placed control of the new department under a three-member industrial commission, appointed by the Governor. This commission would supervise operation of four departmental divisions of Workmen's Compensation, Unemployment Security, Industrial Inspection and Mining Inspection, each headed by a director appointed by the Governor. It would have abolished the Workmen's Compensation Commission and Unemployment Compensation Commissions.

The House adopted substitute, sponsored by Democratic Minority Floor Leader Roy Hamlin of Hannibal, eliminated the three-member industrial commission and placed control in a single director of labor and industrial relations. It also would attach to the department the Workmen's Compensation and Unemployment Compensation Commissions, without destroying their separate identities, instead of merging these activities into divisions of the department.

House sponsors of the original Senate bill, while unable to block adoption of the Hamlin substitute, declared the modified version would be thrown into conference committee, where a fight will be made for reinstatement of the original provisions.

Three Bills to Governor.
The House finally passed yesterday and sent to the Governor three bills requiring administrative rules and regulations of agencies of the executive department, except those relating to organization and internal management, to be filed with the Secretary of State at least 10 days before becoming effective and providing for court review of the decisions, rules and regulations of such agencies.

Among other provisions the bill requires each state agency to file with the Secretary of State a certified copy of each rule or regulation now in effect, or adopted hereafter. The Secretary of State will be required to keep a permanent register of such rules, open to public inspection. Publication of a monthly bulletin, containing the text of rules and regulations filed the preceding month, also is required.

ANACONDA WIRE PAYS U.S.
$1,626,000 TO SETTLE SUIT

NEW YORK, Feb. 28 (AP)—United States Attorney John F. X. McGohey said today that the Anaconda Wire and Cable Co. had settled for $1,626,000 a Government damage claim based on alleged irregular manufacturing, testing and inspection practices on certain contracts.

The alleged irregularities, said to have occurred mainly in production of Army field wire and Navy degaussing (anti-mine) cable, occurred in 1941 and 1942 at the company's plants at Marion, Ind.; Pawtucket, R.I.; and Hastings, N.Y., McGohey said.

Criminal proceedings, resulting in fines and sentences against the company and certain officers and employees, were instigated because of practices at the Marion and Pawtucket plants. Under the settlement, civil suits here and in Rhode Island will be dismissed.

EAST SIDE GROCERY BURNS

Fire which started when a boy accidentally dropped a can of kerosene into a floor heating register yesterday destroyed a one-story frame grocery operated by William J. Grider at 5519 Missouri avenue, south of East St. Louis. Loss was estimated at $2500.

Flames spread rapidly when the kerosene, which the boy had bought for a dime, spilled on the pipeless furnace beneath the register.

G.M.C. STRIKE NEGOTIATORS IN SURPRISE SESSION

Meeting Held in Apartment of Corporation President, Who Has Been Ill.

DETROIT, Feb. 28 (AP)—Negotiators in the General Motors strike met this afternoon in a surprise session in the private apartment of President C. E. Wilson in the corporation's administration building.

Although none of the group would comment, significance was attached to the meeting, for Wilson, who has been ill for several days, has not attended recent negotiating sessions.

In the group going to Wilson's apartment were President R. J. Thomas, Vice President Walter P. Reuther, and Secretary-Treasurer George F. Addes of the striking CIO United Auto Workers' Union, vice presidents Harry W. Anderson and Harry E. Coen of General Motors, and James F. Dewey, special federal mediator in the strike.

The strike reached its 100th day today, having cost management and labor more than $750,000,000.

The corporation has lost $500,000,000 in unfilled orders; $75,000,000 in production workers have lost wages estimated at $113,000,000 to $128,000,000; the merchandising division of the automobile industry had lost more than $100,000,000 in sales commissions and other millions were lost by companies and workers dependent on General Motors for parts.

One such concern is the Packard Motor Car Co., whose 8000 production employees have been idle more than a month because of shortage of parts supplied by General Motors subsidiaries.

Management and union representatives still apparently were apart on the issues of wages, seniority and vacations.

The union is demanding a wage increase of 19½ cents an hour and the company has offered 18½ cents.

The union, basing its calculations on a 40-hour work week, placed the wage loss at $113,000,000 and the management, figuring the week at 45½ hours, fixed the amount at $128,000,000.

2076 On Relief in Flint. In Flint, Mich., where 50,000 production workers represent the greatest concentration of General Motors employees in a single community, 2076 strikers' families are listed as receiving welfare relief. The average payment is $38.06 a family each month.

Among those on partial relief is Charles Lindenschmidt, a 23-year-old former Marine, his wife, Dorothy, and son, Robert, 15 months old. Another baby is expected shortly.

Lindenschmidt, who was employed at the General Motors Fisher body division, driving a truck, earned $38.66 a week. He says his savings account was exhausted when the first baby came. He pays his rent, reduced for the duration of the strike from $12 to $8 a week, from a $34.50 a month Government pension. He gets food and milk tickets from the Genesee county (Flint) Social Welfare Board.

"I think the union and General Motors could settle the strike a lot quicker," he said today. "I wish to gosh they could get together. We're getting in worse shape all the time."

Another Case. In contrast to the case of 46-year-old Henry E. Janowsky, who worked as a moulder in the Buick motor division foundry, Janowsky, who has been employed at Buick for 19 years, is buying a five-room house which he occupies with his wife, Agnes. They have several grown children.

He said today that he has been able to get through the work stoppage because of a modest bank account. He said the strike "was something that had to be." Asserting he saw it coming, he added that he felt the "quicker it came the quicker it would be over."

A back-to-work summons went out today to 38,000 Ford workers idle since Jan. 25 because of a shortage of steel.

Company officers directed them to return to their jobs Monday in manufacturing divisions of the Rouge and Highland Park plants in the Detroit area.

Also called back were workers at the Ford Iron Mountain plant, where station wagon bodies are built, and at all Michigan hydro plants.

Company spokesmen pointed out, however, that the Ford and Mercury body assembly in the Rouge plant press steel building and branch assembly plants throughout the country will not resume operations before March 11.

BENJAMIN F. GILBREATH DIES

AFTER FALL IN PROOF ROOM

Benjamin F. Gilbreath died today at Missouri Baptist Hospital following a fall in the proof room of the Post-Dispatch, where he was employed. He was 74 years old and lived at 7212 Michigan avenue.

Mr. Gilbreath worked as a reporter for the Post-Dispatch from 1919 to 1923, when he established the Carondelet Review, which succeeded publication in 1943. In that year he returned to the Post-Dispatch as a proof reader.

Surviving are his wife, a son, Pvt. Ralph E. and a daughter, Miss Pauline Gilbreath.

FEED BOTH—FOR VARIETY

Guard Against the Ailments Caused by Malnutrition

Many dogs, seemingly well-fed, suffer from diet deficiencies because their food lacks certain necessary nutrients. Meat alone is not a complete ration. But remember—Friskies contains every food element your dog needs and should have, in correctly balanced proportions.

FOOD VALUE—Friskies' 19 ingredients provide all your dog needs for 100% nourishment. Vitamins, minerals, vegetable and meat-meal proteins—a complete balanced diet.

FLAVOR—Natural flavors among the 19 essential ingredients make Friskies delicious to normal dogs. Countless taste tests repeatedly prove that dogs prefer Friskies to other similar prepared foods.

SAFETY—Many dog ailments of stomach, skin, teeth, and bones are caused by faulty diet. Feed Friskies to your dog as a protection against diet deficiencies.

ECONOMY—Concentrated to almost 90% actual nutrients, Friskies nourishes completely at low cost. That's why this type of food is preferred by professional kennels and veterinarians.

WASHINGTON 'TOUR OF DUTY' URGED ON BUSINESS LEADERS

Retiring Cabinet Aid to Make Crusade for Better Men in Government.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (UP)—Assistant Secretary of the Navy H. Struve Hensel, ending his Government career today, said that as a private citizen he is going to make a "one-man crusade" in an effort to get leading business and professional men to serve a tour of duty in Washington.

Chief stumbling block to his proposal, he admitted, is the present "low pay scales" in high Government jobs. As Assistant Navy Secretary Hensel made $9800 a year.

Here is Hensel's three-point program for attracting business and professional leaders to serve in Washington:

1. Raise salaries "so that a man can bring his family here and live decently."
2. Place top jobs under civil service—"this would do away with a lot of cocktail artists."
3. Explain to industrialists that it is to their advantage as well as the Government's to have their best men serve for several years in some important post.

5 FIREMEN HURT AS ROOF, PART OF WALL COLLAPSE

alarms, but firemen's efforts to get at the blaze were hampered by dense clouds of black smoke from burning tires and by crowds of spectators who gathered quickly at the scene.

Started in Gasoline Can. Albert Becker, 1559A Withnell avenue, employed as a vulcanizer at the tire re-treading plant, told a Post-Dispatch reporter he and nine other workmen were seated in the middle of the building eating lunch when a five-gallon can of gasoline became ignited.

"There was a hissing flash and a table nearby, stacked with tires, began to burn," he said. "The flames spread quickly and we rushed out." He said the gasoline was used for cleaning tires.

Fred Arbogast, 3433 Iowa street, another workman, said he and Becker were attempting to carry tires out of the building when an explosion in the rear blew them 15 feet out the front door.

Fire is Kept From Spreading. Spread of the flames to the next-door Marvel Slipper Co. was prevented by firemen who covered stacks of felt with fire-proof material. Employees of the slipper company were out of the building eating lunch at the time.

Negro tenements across the alley from the burning building were not endangered. Traffic on Twelfth street out-bound from the business district was halted at Delmar boulevard, and in-bound traffic was detoured around the scene.

DOUBT ON CITY'S AUTHORITY TO CONDEMN GARAGE SITES

A legal opinion expressing doubt that the city has the authority to condemn sites for lease to private interests for the construction of parking garages in the downtown area, as was proposed by the Associated Retailers of St. Louis to alleviate traffic congestion in the downtown area, was presented the Board of Estimate and Apportionment today by City Counselor George L. Stemmler.

A copy of the opinion was ordered sent to the retailers' organization.

Comptroller Louis Nolte advised the board that an investigation by his office has convinced him that he could not spend city funds for purchase of a bus to operate between the city and the veterans' housing facilities at Wentzville, because he could find no "extraordinary emergency." He said the investigation showed that only 66 of the 100 dwellings available at Wentzville were occupied and only 11 of the occupants were St. Louisans.

The board approved a bill pending in the state legislature which would place the 48 regular employees of the Board of Election Commissioners on an annual salary of $2100, instead of the present arrangement whereby 28 of them are paid $7 a day and the others, $6. The board also authorized purchase by the city of the government-owned health center at Grand and Park avenues, which was furnished and equipped for $61,000, for $30,866.

MORE MOTORISTS ARRESTED FOR FAILURE TO GET LICENSES

The campaign against motorists failing to display 1946 state and city automobile licenses continued today.

Ninety-five summonses were issued yesterday by police in the first day of the drive against motorists without city license stickers and 71 more arrests were made for failure to have new state licenses.

Those given summonses may pay a $1 fine at the Traffic Bureau in police headquarters after showing a new city automobile license, otherwise the cases are certified to police court.

ROBOT B-17 GIVES PREVIEW OF ROLE IN ATOM BOMB TEST

'Drone' Controlled by Radio From Jeeps and 'Mother Plane.'

ROSWELL, N.M., Feb. 28 (UP)—A 46,000-pound Flying Fortress took off from the Army air field here yesterday, circled the base for 30 minutes, and landed. In so doing it made history, for at no time during the 30 minutes did any human agency aboard the plane touch a single control.

The entire operation was remotely controlled by radio, the landing and take off from jeeps on the ground, and the flight itself from a "mother plane" flying to the right and a few feet above and behind the "drone."

Drone planes are not new, but the big B-17s here have carried the art of radio-controlled flying to unprecedented heights. In past experiments, the landings always had been handled by a human "safety pilot" aboard the drone. A safety pilot, Capt. W. F. Tooman of Boise, Ida., was aboard in yesterday's test.

"But I didn't touch a thing," he said afterward.

The demonstration was a dress rehearsal of what B-17 drones will do when the atomic bomb test on Navy ships is held May 15 at Bikini atoll in the Marshalls.

Herded at distances of 10 to 12 miles or more by mother ships, the drones will fly into the atomic cloud with electronic devices which will record what goes on in that stratosphere. They will even collect samples of the radioactive matter in the cloud.

Today's test climaxed years of remote-control experimentation. The star of the demonstration was a little metal box about five inches wide, five deep and eight long. It weighs about five pounds.

On the face of the box is a metal "stick," counterpart of the control stick in some airplanes. There also are buttons and tiny levers.

With these miniature implements a ground control man, peering through binoculars on a tripod, beside his radio jeep, can operate the drone's engine, flying controls and brakes. In all, the little box can perform 10 functions and their opposites aboard the drone, thanks to radio impulses, relays and compact electrical motors.

Yesterday two B-29 bombers from this field dropped two "big boys"—mock atomic bombs—at a range near Albuquerque while three B-29 photographic planes and a couple of instrument-dropping craft went through the closely-timed maneuvers of recording the "bursts."

PHONE UNIONISTS TO MEET WITH COMPANY TOMORROW

Another conciliation meeting between representatives of the Southwestern Telephone Workers' Union and the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in an effort to settle the union's wage demands and avert a scheduled strike next Thursday by the union's 5,000 members here and 25,000 elsewhere in a five-state area is set for 10 a.m. tomorrow.

The Illinois Telephone Traffic Union, representing 1800 long distance operators in Chicago and 5700 in downstate Illinois, voted yesterday to support the scheduled nationwide strike of Southwestern and other affiliates of the National Federation of Telephone Workers by observing picket lines. Such action would tie up service between Chicago and St. Louis and in the Alton area.

Negotiations between the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. in New York and the Federation of Long Line Telephone Workers were broken off today after a 14-hour conference failed to settle the union's wage and hour demands. The union represents 19,000 workers, including 500 in St. Louis.

FRENCH ACCEPT U. S. PROPOSAL ON FRANCO ISSUE of interfering directly in Spanish domestic affairs.

The note was understood to emphasize this country's hope that a change could be brought about without another civil war.

Would Pave Way Into U.N.O.

It was believed the Spanish people would be assured that compliance with these steps would open the doors of the United Nations Organization to their country.

Informed quarters said the United States note, whether expressly stated or not, gave the impression that this Government did not consider that a monarchy in Spain could endure.

These sources also suggested that they got the impression the United States was not convinced that Jose Giral, head of the exiled Spanish republican government, could successfully head a temporary government because of reported opposition to him within his native country.

For these reasons, it was said, the United States note intimated that the "caretaker" government should be made up of all Spanish elements, including representatives of the Spanish army, judiciary and all exiled groups.

Meanwhile, the State Department announced today that it had received a French request for United States support of a French proposal to submit the Spanish issue to the United Nations Security Council in New York next month. It was understood that similar French notes had been dispatched to Moscow and London.

French deputies in Paris said yesterday that Foreign Minister Georges Bidault had made the appeal in a joint note to Washington and London.

ANTI-FRANCO CRIES SPREAD IN EUROPE

LONDON, Feb. 28 (AP)—The Spanish Government announced today that it had closed two main gateways between France and Spain more than 24 hours before the effective time of a French Government order to close the French Spanish border to trade to-night at midnight.

The closure was made effective both at Port Bou on the east coast and Irun on the west coast, with all normal traffic reported barred, including the two to three freight trains which usually operate across the border daily.

(The United Press quoted French press dispatches from Madrid as reporting Spanish troop movements along the entire length of the sealed frontier. One dispatch said soldiers of the Madrid garrison had been sent north toward the border.)

Anti-Franco sentiment bubbled up all over Europe, meanwhile, in support of the French demand for a diplomatic break with Spain and for United Nations action against the government of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, which France has termed a menace to international peace and security.

There were demonstrations in Brussels and Sofia at which the governments of Belgium and Bulgaria were called on to act against Franco. The regular news broadcast of the Prague radio was interrupted with an announcement that the Czechoslovakia Government "joins the stand of the nations who strongly demand the end of the cruel Spanish regime."

The French news agency said a crowd of nearly 5,000 persons occupied the Spanish consulate at Sete, on the Mediterranean, in an anti-Franco demonstration today and raised the Spanish Republican flag over the building.

Another crowd at Auch, in the Pyrenees, broke into the Spanish consulate and caused considerable damage, it was reported.

In Paris, Jose Giral, premier of the Spanish Republican government in exile, declared in a statement that his government was ready to go to Spain and take over from Franco. However, his government lacks the formal support of Britain, France and the United States.

In Copenhagen, police reported a hand grenade had been tossed into the garden of the Spanish legation after demonstrators bearing "down with Franco" signs had paraded before the building. Police said no one was injured.

5 JAPS GET DEATH IN STRANGLING OF 3 B-29 FLYERS

Seven Others Sentenced to Prison Terms for Killing, Cremation of Captives.

By RICHARD MASSOCK
SHANGHAI Feb. 28 (AP)—Five Japanese military men were sentenced today to be hanged and seven others received prison terms for the strangulation and cremation of three American B-29 flyers at Hankow in December, 1944. An eighteenth defendant, the only civilian to be tried, was acquitted. The United States military trial commission decreed death by hanging for Maj. Gen. Masataka Kuburugi, chief of staff and deputy commander of the Japanese Thirty-fourth Army in Hankow; Warrant Officer Tsutomu Fujii, who supervised the killings, and the three who pulled the cords about the helpless airmen's necks: Sgt. Major Shozo Masui, Sgt. Koichi Masuda, and Pvt. Yosaburo Shirakawa. American defense counsel said the condemned men probably would ask Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, reviewing authority, for clemency, but that no higher appeal was planned. Col. Kameji Eukimoto, commandant of Japan's Hankow garrison, was sentenced to life imprisonment. Terms of others ranged from 18 months to 20 years. The civilian who was acquitted had served only as a witness at the killings, testimony showed. All 18 defendants had been charged with the murder of Second Lt. Lester R. White, Slickville, Pa.; Sgt. Henry W. Wheaton, Milwaukee, Wis., and Sgt. James E. Forbes Jr., East Hartford, Conn. The prosecution had asked the death penalty only for those directly responsible for the killings. A dispatch from Singapore reported that Lt. Gen. Fukuei Shimpei was sentenced to be shot following conviction by a British military court of mistreating 15,000 British and Australian war prisoners in 1942.

DACHAU CAMP HEAD BRAZEN IN KILLING, PROFESSOR SAYS

Dr. Klaus Schilling, head of the infamous Dachau concentration camp in Germany, thought no more of killing human beings through medical experiments than the average man would think of spraying Japanese beetles, Prof. Roy S. Glasgow, chairman of the Department of Electrical Engineering at Washington University, told members of the Co-operative Club of St. Louis at a meeting at Hotel Statler yesterday. Prof. Glasgow, who served as radio and radar consultant to the War Department for four years, said he had an opportunity to interview Schilling while in Germany last year on a mission to study German technical methods. To discover how long a flyer shot down over the North Sea could survive in the waters Glasgow related. He also injected them with malaria germs and then experimented with serums. "When I questioned him about it," Prof. Glasgow said, "Schilling adopted the attitude that it didn't make much difference what he supposed to die anyhow. The way he saw it, he was actually contributing to medical science."

$1,000,000 FRAUD FUGITIVE CAUGHT AFTER FIVE YEARS

Ex-Official of Waterbury, Conn., Found Selling Religious Articles in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Feb. 28 (AP)—Daniel J. Leary, former Waterbury, Conn., city comptroller, who disappeared in 1941 on the eve of starting a 10- to 15-year prison sentence after being convicted in a million-dollar fraud conspiracy, waived extradition today, his masquerade as a salesman of religious articles ended.

Edward J. Hickey, Connecticut state police commissioner, disclosed last night that Leary admitted his identity after Hickey and other Connecticut state police officers had confronted him in the detective bureau, Hickey quoted Leary as saying.

"What's the use? I'm Leary, and you know who I am."

After the hearing today, Leary, 49, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, said, "If you can't take care of your friends in politics, what the hell are you in there for?"

He left for Connecticut immediately in Hickey's custody.

Picked up on Michigan avenue in the Loop Tuesday by a traffic policeman after a former Waterbury resident recognized him, Leary had identified himself as James Donovan, 52 years old, a salesman of religious articles.

"It's really been hell, Ed," Hickey quoted Leary as telling him. Leary was sentenced to prison for his part in a conspiracy to defraud the city of Waterbury of more than $1,000,000 and Hickey has been one of the state's principal witnesses.

Detective Charles Karnick of Chicago police said Leary told him that after he fled from Waterbury in March 1941, forfeiting a $50,000 bond, he went to New York, then to Florida and came to Chicago in 1942.

Police said that Leary had $4500 in his pocket and a financial report indicating he had invested $78,532.81 in the Catholic Religious Mart and made a profit of $10,071.53 in five months. Previously he had been associated with the Midwest Religious Goods Co. here.

Connecticut had offered a $5000 reward for Leary's arrest. Leary and nine other men were convicted in August 1939 on charges of conspiracy to defraud the city of Waterbury. Although the indictment charged $1,000,000 in fraud, authorities said that the city actually was bilked of about $3,000,000. Leary had been narrowly defeated for re-election as comptroller and the new comptroller charged accounts were irregular. The investigation that followed uncovered the fraud.

PERSONAL PROPERTY FORMS BEING MAILED BY ASSESSOR

Forms on which St. Louis taxpayers may file returns listing their tangible personal property and its estimated value under provisions of the new constitution are being mailed out by City Assessor Eugene M. Guise.

The returns, on which no affidavit is necessary this year, must be filed with the assessor on or before April 1 to avoid an arbitrary assessment and penalty. Persons failing to receive a return form may obtain one at the assessor's office in the city hall. Tax bills will be mailed out in October and must be paid by the first of the year.

Assessment of real estate is being made by deputy assessors, Guise said. Assessment of intangible personal property cannot be undertaken until the Legislature determines the types of property included in this category. Guise emphasized that the procedure on assessing tangible personal property now followed in the city of St. Louis is unaffected by Gov. Phil Donnelly's veto of the law covering assessment procedure in St. Louis and Jackson counties.

TROOPS IN SAIGON BACK NEWSPAPER PLANT

French Indochina, Feb. 28 (AP)—Rioting French servicemen last night sacked the plant of the Socialist party newspaper, Justice, the home of the newspaper's political director, and the downtown apartment and "lace of business of a prominent Socialist."

The troops said they were retaliating for what they called the newspaper's "pro-Annamite" attitude and for the publication of articles criticizing the personal conduct of the French troops in Saigon.

22 ON RESEARCH STAFF STRICKEN WITH 'Q' FEVER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)—An outbreak of "Q" fever, some what similar to virus pneumonia, has stricken 22 workers at the National Institute of Health at Bethesda, Md.

All are employed in a building housing a laboratory in which study recently was resumed on the disease, named "Q" because it first was identified among slaughter house workers in Queensland, Australia. The disease is caused by organisms known as rickettsiae.

None of those affected was directly engaged in the laboratory, which is part of the research center of the United States Public Health Service.

Dr. Charles Armstrong, chief of the institute's division of infectious diseases made this comment: "We started working on Q fever again a few weeks ago and it got away from us again just as it did before."

When the institute started working on Q fever in 1940, 15 persons became ill. One died.

MAGAZINE FEATURES ARTICLE ON HANNEGAN

Says 'Truman's Political Quarterback' Has More Force Than Finesse

The current issue of the Saturday Evening Post, in a featured article by Rufus Jarman on Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan as "Truman's Political Quarterback," quotes "an eminent Democrat" as saying:

"Bob is a good guy and a good chairman, but he has still got a lot of St. Louis in his hair."

This, as shown by other paragraphs, means that Hannegan's methods have more force than finesse. "He uses the meat-ax instead of the rapier; he prefers to smash through center rather than to execute fancy runs around the end," the article says.

President Truman's high value ation of Hannegan's services is explained by the statement that the St. Louisan "saved Truman's political life at least once in Missouri." This was in the 1940 senatorial election.

"Truman was regarded as a political dead duck," Jarman writes. "St. Louis was expected to present a 100,000 majority to Gov. Lloyd C. Stark." Hannegan, it is related, proposed Stark as a candidate for Vice President. "To confuse the issue and give the idea that Stark was a candidate for everything. The night before the primary, sample ballots bearing the candidate names of the Stark-Hannegan machine were distributed. The machine backed Truman in 22 of the 28 wards. . . Truman carried the city by about 8000 votes, and thus aided, was able to carry the state by a bare 7000."

The writer refers to "the infamous governorship steal" as a "contest," which it was not—a contest in due form would have been legitimate—it was, instead, a so-called "investigation," designed to oust the Republican candidate out. He tells of the defeat of Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann for re-election in April 1941 and of the later naming of Hannegan as internal revenue collector with Senator Truman's backing. Hannegan the writer says, did not want the collectorship, as he was making about $40,000 a year in the law. "But he got mad when the Post-Dispatch called the idea of his being collector 'an affront to thousands' and the Globe-Democrat termed him 'the most discredited boss of a discredited party.'"

350,000 STEEL WORKERS REPORTED STILL ON STRIKE

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 28 (UP)—Some 350,000 CIO United Steel Workers are still on strike, a report by the union showed last night.

The report revealed that 213 companies, employing almost 396,000 members, have signed contracts granting an 18½-cent wage increase.

Less than 600 fabricators and non-integrated companies, employing about 350,000 men, are still strike-bound.

Strong Backing of Vandenberg View on U. N. O. and Russia Shown In Senate Reaction to His Talk

Delegate's Address, Aimed as Reply to Dulles's Critical Statements, Wins Support Through Balanced, Non-Emotional Recital of 'Debts and Credits.'

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28. (AP)—The absorbing attention and spontaneous applause which Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg's speech evoked in the Senate yesterday demonstrated beyond a doubt that the great majority of Democratic and Republican Senators approved his view that a former American stand against Soviet Russia's aggressive self-interest would not jeopardize the United Nations Organization.

The Michigan Republican's timely recital of the facts rather than an emotional plea of an advocate. Not in recent years has a speaker held such close attention of the Senate and the galleries. The press gallery was almost completely filled.

At the end of his address did the veteran foreign relations committee member seek an official conclusion:

"I am sure that the United States has no ulterior designs against any of its neighbors anywhere on earth. We can speak with the extraordinary power inherent in this unselfishness. We need but one rule. What is right? Where is justice? There is no America take her stand."

Answer to Dulles.

Vigorous applause from the floor and galleries marked the end of the speech. Senators on both sides of the aisle rose and with few exceptions walked over to congratulate Vandenberg. Among the interested listeners who shook his hand were former Senator John Townsend (Rep.) of Delaware; Chairman Sol Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Representative Charles A. Eaton of New Jersey, ranking Republican member of the committee, all attended at the London conference, and Representative Clare Booth Luce (Rep.) of Connecticut.

The balding, gray-haired Michigan Senator reported to the Senate sooner than he had expected because he was fearful that the recent critical speech of John Foster Dulles at Princeton had been unduly pessimistic about the future of the United Nations Organization.

Chairman Tom Connally (Dem.) of Texas, of the Foreign Relations Committee, had been scheduled to give the first report but he went from London to Germany and is on his way home. Vandenberg, it is understood, wanted to answer the Princeton speech and any other Dulles might make in the near future.

Vandenberg followed his own advice by being firm but fair with Soviet Russia, particularly regarding Russian delegate Andrei Vishinsky.

Supreme Conundrum.

In general, Vandenberg praised the United Nations Organization and the accomplishments at London. But after recounting how Vishinsky had blocked the proposed settlement of the Syrian and Lebanese demand that Britain and France evacuate their troops from those countries and how Foreign Ministers Bevin of Britain and Bidault of France voluntarily agreed to the Security Council plan against which Russia used the veto procedure, he said:

"I confess that I was proud of Western Democracy that night! And the life of the United Nations took on new assurance and new expectancy in the pattern of their attitudes. On the other hand, I trust I am not unfair in also confessing that it seemed to me the distinguished Soviet delegate one of the ablest statesmen I have ever seen in action—second to be less interested in helping Lebanon and Syria than he was in halting France and Britain—less interested in peace at this point than he was in friction."

"I am certain it poses the same question in all our minds which I am now finding almost every day, in one form or another, in every newspaper I read—what is Russia up to now? It is, of course, the supreme conundrum of our time. We ask it in Manchuria. We ask it in eastern Europe and the Dardanelles. We ask it in Italy where Russia, speaking for Yugoslavia, has already initiated attention to the Polish legions. We ask it in Iran. We ask it in Tripoli. We ask it in the Baltic and the Balkans. We ask it in Poland. We ask it in the capital of Canada. We ask it in Japan."

"We ask it sometimes even in connection with events on our own United States. 'What is Russia up to now?' It is little wonder that we asked it at London. It is less wonder that the answer of London and everywhere else was—a vital bearing on the destiny of the United Nations."

"It would be entirely futile to blink the fact that two great, rival ideologies—democracy in the West and Communism in the East—here find themselves face to face with the desperate need for mutual understanding in find-

MRS. ROOSEVELT SAYS U. N. O. MUST WIN THE CONFIDENCE OF PEOPLES

NEW YORK, Feb. 28 (AP)

MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT said last night the only alternative to the United Nations Organization was world chaos, but that the U. N. O. must win the confidence of all peoples before it could succeed.

Mrs. Roosevelt, a United States delegate to the U. N. O. assembly, said that in the U. N. O. Security Council "rough things were said by men who could say them and take them," and added:

"I'm quite sure that it's a good thing for the peoples of the world to have things said by their representatives. I feel that, because the peoples have got to know what their representatives feel and what they stand for."

"We don't understand some things about Russia. Russia doesn't understand some things about us, and about Great Britain. We will gradually learn. I am not worried about that so much." She spoke at a meeting in Hunter College auditorium, sponsored by the Union for Democratic Action.

ing common ground upon which to strive for peace for both.

"In the final analysis this means that the two greatest spokesmen for these rival ideologies—Soviet Russia and the United States—find themselves face to face with this same need for mutual understanding, both in and out of the United Nations. Indeed, if this does not over-simplify the problem, it might even be said that the future of the United Nations is wrapped up in this equation."

"If this be so, I assert my own belief that we can live together in reasonable harmony if the United States speaks as plainly upon all occasions as Russia does; if the United States just as vigorously sustains its own purposes and its ideals upon all occasions as Russia does; if we abandon the miserable fiction, often encouraged by our own fellow travelers, that we somehow jeopardize the peace if our candor is as firm as Russia's always is; and if we assume a moral leadership which we have too frequently allowed to lapse. The situation calls for patience and good will but not for vacillation."

"Let me make it wholly clear that I do not complain because Russia speaks—indeed, Mr. Vishinsky probably spoke in this security council more than the spokesmen of all the other powers combined. I am glad she speaks. She ought to speak. That is what this forum is for. But it is for others, too—just as Mr. Bevin used it upon more than one eloquent and courageous occasion."

"It is, I repeat, for others too. All should have an equal freedom, an equal duty and an equivalent responsibility. The governments of the world suddenly find themselves in the presence of a new technique in international relations. It is in this focus of the United Nations where the most dominant of all debates and decisions are now calculated to occur. It would be impossible to over-emphasize the importance of our own performance in such epochal events, and the need for positive foreign policies as our consistent guide."

Mutual Honesty Needed.

Quoting with hearty concurrence a recent statement by Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, the American Ambassador designate to Moscow, that in our dealings with Russia, we must be watchful of our own vital interests and "hold to a line beyond which compromise cannot go," the speaker asked:

"But how can we expect our alien friends to know where that line is unless we re-establish the habit of saying only what we mean and meaning every word we say?"

Again associating himself with the statement by Gen. Smith that "America and the U. S. S. R. given honesty and frankness on both sides, can get along together in the future just as well as they have for almost 150 years, in spite of the fact that our government and our economic systems have been quite different," Vandenberg told the Senate with emphasis:

"But honesty and frankness must be mutual."

In his praise of the United Nations—and this was apparently in answer to Dulles—the Senator said he did not "share the melancholy pessimism, heard in some quarters, that the United Nations as the result to this experience (the London conference), will be unable to cope with world realities."

Vandenberg's View Upheld By Democrats

Hatch and Fulbright Approve Stand for Firmness With Russia.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)—The Senate—Republicans and Democrats alike—lined up today behind the stand of Senator Vandenberg that the United States take a firm line in dealing with Soviet Russia.

Senator Hatch (Dem.), New Mexico, a Foreign Relations Committee member who is a close personal friend of President Truman, said Vandenberg "expressed my sentiments about Russia exactly."

Similarly, Senator Fulbright (Dem.), Arkansas, who has criticized what he said was the administration's failure to assume consistent leadership in world affairs, said he thought Vandenberg was "absolutely correct in the essence of his statements."

"We ought to take a fair stand and then be firm about it," Fulbright said. "We cannot assume that we represent all of the moral leadership in the world, but we must speak out for the principles for which we stand."

Senator Ball (Rep.), Minnesota, said he agreed 100 per cent with Vandenberg's position on Russia. Both he and Hatch said they had been "pepped up" by the Senator's report that accomplishments at London far outweighed the meeting's failures.

Senator Russell (Dem.), Georgia, said he subscribed to the general outline Vandenberg laid down and hoped the President and Secretary of State would draw clearly the line beyond which Vandenberg said the world should be told the United States is unwilling to compromise in its international dealings.

Senator Brewster (Rep.), Maine, interpreted the speech as a "decisive suggestion that we need to be as competent as the Russians." "If I think he was trying to tell us that the moral earnestness of the United States should have been far more vigorously asserted at London," Brewster said.

(A United Press dispatch quoted Senator Pepper (Dem.) Georgia, as saying he thought the balance of Vandenberg's speech "told a little against Russia." Pepper said he objected particularly to the manner in which Vandenberg posed the question "what is Russia up to now?" as implying "something ominous." Pepper recently returned from an overseas trip in which he visited Premier Stalin.)

HIROHITO VISITS

JAP DEPARTMENT

STORE, 2000 CHEER

TOKYO, Feb. 28 (AP)—Two thousand subjects cheered Emperor Hirohito as he visited a department store today, but the Communist party quickly censured his recent public tours as a "pre-election campaign for the sake of reactionary political parties."

"We demand that the Emperor and all other war criminals be barred from carrying out any such campaign, read a resolution passed by the party convention. The resolution is to be presented at the imperial household tomorrow."

Gen. Douglas MacArthur never has branded the Emperor as a war criminal suspect, but the Communists and some other Japanese elements have.

GEN. WAINWRIGHT TO RETIRE FROM ARMY, BECOME RANCHER

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Feb. 28 (UP)—Gen. Jonathan Wainwright, the hero of Corregidor, said last night that he would retire from the Army within 18 months and settle down on his Texas ranch after going to the Philippines to dedicate a memorial to Americans who died in the Bataan campaign.

Gen. Wainwright made his plans known when he arrived here for Brownsville's annual Charro Days festival.

Summary of Pearl Harbor Inquiry

Strength of Base's Defenses in Dispute—Kimmel and Short Say They Lacked Men, Arms; Marshall Replies They Could Have Beaten Off Attack if Alert.

(This is the third of four articles sorting out the confusing strands of testimony before the Congressional Pearl Harbor Investigating Committee.)

By CLARKE BEACH

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)

TWO main issues have emerged in the Pearl Harbor controversy: 1. Were the Army and Navy commanders at Pearl Harbor (and the War and Navy Departments in Washington) informed of the danger of a Japanese attack?

2. Did the Pearl Harbor commanders have enough fighting power to resist attack?

The first question was discussed in the first two of these articles. The second question, summarizing testimony at hearings before the congressional investigating committee. In this article we take up testimony dealing with the second point.

Joint Feeding Of Reich Urged By Russia, U.S.

British Bring Up Food Issue After Order for Sharp Cut in Their Zone.

BERLIN, Feb. 28 (AP).

THE United States and Russia proposed at a meeting of the Allied Control Council today that the feeding of Germany be made a unified four-power responsibility. It now is on a zonal basis.

The British brought up the food issue as an aftermath of sharp reductions in rations ordered in the British zone this week.

Lt. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, deputy chief of United States Military Government in Germany, said a few days ago that ration cuts could be expected, but the time of the cuts depended on a survey of the over-all world food situation and how much could be spared for Germany.

Gen. Joseph T. McNarney reported earlier today that the health of Germans in the American zone was holding up well, and that outwardly they were "peaceful and obedient."

In his monthly report, the commander of the United States occupation forces indicated the people had survived the critical winter more successfully than had been originally expected.

He said the Germans were getting an average of 1920 calories a day, with deficiencies noted only among the aged. Nutritional surveys, he said, revealed that women were faring the best and in some cases were even gaining weight. (British authorities announced yesterday the ration in their zone would be cut from 1500 to 1014 calories beginning March 4 because of a food supply shortage.)

"Sufficient hospital facilities appear to be in prospect for the first time," the report said.

Displaced persons continue to be a source of trouble, the report disclosed. There still are 556,000 displaced persons in the United States zone, approximately half of them classified as "stateless persons," McNarney's report said.

"The UNRRA educational program was pushed during the month," McNarney reported, "but response from displaced persons was so far not encouraging."

He said that more than 1,000,000 Germans had been processed in the American De-Nazification program, with a total of 260,000 persons ousted from public employ-

Welles Assails 'Blue Book' Attack On Argentina, Says U.S. Coercion Will Wreck Good Neighbor Policy

Ideology of the Perons a Menace, but Way to Strengthen Inter-American System Is by Joint Consultation and Not Unilateral Action, He Asserts.

By SUMNER WELLES
Former Under Secretary of State.

THESE reflections are written before the announcement of the outcome of the Argentine national elections.

If Jose P. Tamborini, the presidential candidate of the Democratic Alliance, is elected, the Argentine people will return to the form of democratic government which they maintained for many decades prior to the first revolt of the Argentine Army in 1930. Dr. Tamborini's election also would result in the renewal of nominal relations between the United States and Argentina. His election would save the United States from a critical and dangerous embarrassment.

But no matter what the outcome of the elections may be, the State Department's recent action will arouse suspicion and hostility toward the United States throughout Latin America for a long time to come.

Danger of Such Measures.

In "The Time for Decision" I wrote two years ago:

"The people in this country who have so vehemently urged the government to adopt a policy of coercion, or at least of retaliation toward Argentina, are advocating a course which will have completely opposite results from those they seek. Not only do the basic principles of existing inter-American agreements and the good neighbor policy itself preclude an attempt on the part of any American nation to dictate the policy of another but also any such attempt will provoke a reaction upon the part of the Argentine people which may well create a permanent rupture. Such measures could do incalculable damage to the interests of the Western Hemisphere during the uncertain years which lie ahead. If we believe in the efficacy of democratic principles and in the ultimate power of public opinion, then we must permit the Argentine people to determine their own destinies for themselves."

The State Department's "blue book" was made public two weeks before the Argentine national elections. It was obviously intended to influence their outcome. It will be widely interpreted as intervention in the sovereign concerns of the Argentine people. One can imagine what the reaction here would be should some major power, such as the Soviet Union, publish an official document assailing the highest authorities of the Government of the United States, and a presidential candidate, immediately prior to national elections in this country.

Method Also Criticized.

The document was published by the State Department without prior consultation with the governments of the other American republics, as is required by existing inter-American agreements. The communication of the document to the ambassadors of the other American republics barely 24 hours before its publication does not constitute even the semblance of consultation. The action taken by this government was purely unilateral.

The State Department persists in its fatuous insistence that the legitimate grievances of all of the peoples of the Americas against the present Argentine dictatorship warrant the prosecution of a bitter and exclusive feud between Argentina and the United States. It is incapable of understanding that what is required is a joint effort on the part of all of the American governments patiently and constructively to cure the deep-seated political, social, and economic evils which enable such demagogues as Peron to gain wide popular support.

There is no statesman of the Americas who is a better democrat, nor a truer friend of the United States, than Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, former Foreign Minister of Brazil. Dr. Aranha informed the press on Feb. 14:

"I can assure you that the State Department has hurled a bomb with its blue book, without pre-

Our Common Trust Funds Provide Investment Diversification For Small Trusts

ONE of the greatest factors in investment safety is wide investment diversification. The underlying principle is that of spreading the risk so that no unforeseen adverse development affecting a single company, a single industry, or a single locality can have a serious effect upon the investment list as a whole.

It is difficult to obtain adequate diversification in a small trust or in a small investment fund of any kind if it is invested separately. To meet this situation, this company operates two common trust funds in which the funds of many trusts are combined for investment purposes. Under this plan each small trust can obtain a degree of investment diversification that in the past has been possible only in the case of large trusts.

The following summarizes the important facts about our Common Trust Funds:

TWO COMMON TRUST FUNDS

Common Trust Fund "A" is diversified between various types of securities, whereas Common Trust Fund "B" is invested almost wholly in common stocks. The "A" Fund is a suitable medium for investing the entire amount of a small Trust, whereas the "B" Fund is suitable for investing such portions of individual trusts as we believe should be invested in common stocks.

CONFORMS TO FEDERAL RESERVE REGULATIONS

Our Common Trust Funds are operated to conform to the Federal Reserve Board regulations pertaining to common trust funds, and to the laws of Missouri.

WHO MAY INVEST IN COMMON TRUST FUNDS?

Investment in our Common Trust Funds is limited to trusts of which the St. Louis Union Trust Company is the sole trustee or a co-trustee. These funds are not investment trusts and participation in them is not open to individual investors.

NO CHARGE FOR MANAGEMENT OF COMMON TRUST FUNDS

This Company receives no compensation whatsoever for the management of these Common Trust Funds, but it continues to receive its usual trustee fees from the various trusts whose funds are invested in our Common Trust Funds.

ADMISSIONS AND WITHDRAWALS

Each Common Trust Fund is divided into units of equal value, and is valued monthly for purposes of admission and withdrawal. The price per unit is determined by dividing the total market value of the investments comprising the fund by the number of units outstanding. There are no "loading" charges, fees or other charges involved in the price of the units.

INVESTMENT OF FUNDS

Investment for our Common Trust Funds is limited to those that are proper investments for trustees under the laws of Missouri, and under the provisions of the various trusts whose funds are invested in the Common Trust Fund. Each Fund is reviewed every month and if any investment no longer qualifies, the plan provides that it must be sold before any admissions to or withdrawals from the Fund takes place. All investments are purchased in the open market and this Company is prohibited by the terms of its plans and the Federal Reserve Board regulations from investing its own funds in our Common Trust Funds, from selling securities to them, buying securities from them, or having any financial interest whatsoever in the Funds.

MAXIMUM INVESTMENT PER TRUST

The Federal Reserve Board regulations formerly limited the maximum investment that any one Trust may make in our Common Trust Funds to $25,000.00. In 1945 this maximum was raised to $50,000.00 and as a result the field of usefulness of these funds has been greatly increased.

If your estate is of moderate size, broad investment diversification, made possible by the use of our common trust funds, will prove an important safeguard. Make this protection available to your estate by leaving it in trust and naming this company as your executor and trustee.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

All Are Veterans

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

During the war, we Americans were all in it together. We had a fighting front and a home front. While those on the home front fought out the war in comparative safety, that could not be helped. They did suffer dislocation of jobs, and they gladly suffered privations, because they felt they were the soldiers on the home front.

But now, after the war, it seems that only one group of people fought the war—armed forces veterans. Out of this war has grown a class distinction. "You think like a civilian. I think like a veteran." Even in your letter column this distinction is apparent. This is only natural, and, given no impetus, would probably fade away with the rest of the cruel memories of war.

But such a distinction is beginning to hurt, particularly in the present housing crisis. Such utterances as one by Wilson Wyatt might even give this distinction into discrimination. He maintains that "war veterans must be given first priority in obtaining living quarters as vacancies develop," that any waiting "should be done by the non-veterans."

Does Mr. Wyatt mean that the soldier on the home front has not the right to shelter his family and children because he did not wear a uniform? Shall he simply cease to exist?

It is no longer a question of waiting, but of living. Some civilians have enough of a handicap with the restriction on children without acquiring another in the shape of the veteran.

We all fought this war together. True, in the evil scheme of things, some gave their lives, some gave their eyes, their legs and arms, and others gave only a part of their security and lives. It was not mainly a self-appointed choice, but the pick-and-choose roulette of war. Still, we were in it together. Cannot we work our way back together, as one class, as Americans? Are we not all veterans of this war?

The only true distinction or privilege or priority should go to the wounded, to the sick and maimed. To them we all owe a debt so enormous that not even a lifetime of consideration could commensurate their loss. To the fallen dead will go a distinction far beyond our poor power: that of immortality.

Now that the Pearl Harbor hearings have been concluded, I find it remarkable that neither Senator Ferguson nor his colleagues, Keefe and Gearhart, ever got around to using the punch line of Zero Mostel's famous isolationist Congressman who demanded: "What the hell was Hawaii doing in the Pacific?"

Blast at the NAM

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

For the past 40 years the NAM and groups of its type have harped upon "full production" as the answer to most of our problems. They have chewed that same old war of gum so long it is time they began a new pack. Production, indeed, is important, but with a constant increase of automatic machinery displacing labor, full, adequate consumption is far more important if we are to avoid violence and bloodshed.

With an army of unemployed outside the gates waiting for an opportunity to produce, production problems are easily solved. But it is far more difficult to put into the pockets of all the people purchasing power that will insure regular, even and constant production. In all our national economy, purchasing power is the pivotal point.

The "National Association of Monopolists" sedulously avoids this question of purchasing power. It favors unemployment and scarcity in order to obtain huge profits. It is bitterly opposed to the OPA and its ceiling prices. OPA limits profits, so NAM wants to remove the "shackles" of price control.

In Mexico there is no OPA. Monopolists are not "shackled" with price control. Since 1938 food prices in Mexico have increased 400 per cent while wages have increased only 100. Cheap suits cost $30, better suits $100. All prices have increased approximately 400 per cent and are still rising. Monopolies, such as the electric, are having the time of their lives. Never were profits so lush; the goose hangs high, wide and handsome; the sky is the limit until—as George Seldes aptly puts it—until the balloon explodes and no one has a parachute.

Riddance of Rats

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I used to be bothered with rats at my food store, even with a cat around. But one day I got tired of it. I got some poison, spread it on bread and put it at the rat holes. Then I closed all the holes with cement.

I bought some garbage pails with tight covers. I saw to it that no food was thrown in the ashpits.

After that, I haven't seen a rat in the building for the last two years, even though the building is very old.

ANDREW SAMIOS.

No Half-Way Control

Only a general assault will rid St. Louis of its rat menace. When the Board of Estimate meets today, it must consider a clean-up of trash as one necessity, and establishment of a strong rodent control agency as another. Use of either measure alone would mean a half-way job of ridding this city of its rat plague.

St. Louis already seems assured of municipal trash collection. All the city officials favor it, and most of them approve of a flat service charge to pay for it. The question yet to be answered is, Should rubbish be burned in city incinerators, or dumped and covered with dirt in a sanitary fill?

The first method has the disadvantage of high initial cost, while sanitary fills create an additional problem of rodent control. The solution depends upon local disposal facilities and funds, as Arthur C. Meyers, Director of Streets and Sewers, made plain in an excellent report to the Mayor a year ago.

Now that Mayor Kaufmann has named a committee to tackle the trash collection problem, St. Louisans will await the committee report with expectation. "St. Louis has waited 25 years for rubbish and ash collection," the Mayor says. That is a long time to keep the public waiting for a necessary service.

Yet a clean-up campaign alone will not rid us of rats. Rats are wily and vicious, as the Mirror of Public Opinion article on this page shows. Drive rats out of ashpits, and they may well try to move in with all of us. In New York, rats were held at bay by a variety of measures: better sanitary conditions, improved food storage, rat-proofing of buildings and increased power for city inspectors to "slap on a violation and make it stick."

In other words, rats produce a complex threat which requires complex antidotes. No one measure alone will conquer rats.

The inadequacy of what St. Louis has done so far is as obvious as the rats running around our houses and alleys. The present Rat Control Service in the Health Department has been limited to extermination or poisoning work. As the Mirror article says, "Killing them off periodically is a waste of time; it's like taking aspirin for a cancer."

Furthermore, the Rat Control Service has had to beg other city departments to enforce what rat control ordinances we now have. The job is simply too big for a small subdivision of municipal government. While the buck is passed, St. Louis faces an infestation of a million rats.

This newspaper has pointed out before that our smoke pall persisted until the city provided strict ordinances and a responsible enforcement agency to deal with smoke. Can we do less to rid ourselves of the evil of rats?

A year ago, Alderman Vernon Riehl and an aldermanic committee made a thorough study of the rat menace, and sought the advice of experts of the Federal Rodent Control Division. Then the committee offered three bills to establish an independent Division of Rodent Control in the Department of Welfare, of which the present Rat Control Service is a secondary subdivision.

The proposed agency would have authority to enforce strict rat control ordinances through hearings and prosecution. Such power is necessary to support an extensive education campaign in behalf of rat-proof construction, storage and sanitation. These measures, and this undivided authority, are absolutely essential in the war on rats.

While the Aldermen are overwhelmingly in favor of the Riehl bills, a few city officials appear critical. They maintain that the Riehl proposal would duplicate work of the Rat Control Service, or that further long study is needed. But the intention is not duplication, but incorporation of present services under the new agency. As for further study, that could mean further delay. All the studying necessary was done a year ago.

The Riehl bills should be passed to supplement municipal trash collection. The Board of Estimate—Mayor Kaufmann, Comptroller Nolte and President Schweitzer of the Board of Aldermen—must make the requested $50,000 appropriation available. The war with rats is a constant war, and this sum is a reasonably small war chest.

It would be a costly mistake for St. Louis to neglect the advice of all the authorities on rat control. Their advice is clear: fight rats on every front; neglect no opportunity for battle. Half-way measures are an invitation to vicious guests.

The long-suffering consumer is one element in American life that hasn't struck—yet.

On Behalf of a Nuisance

Our national self-respect and our duties as human beings demand that we do all possible to stop the spread of famine. . . . We cannot meet this situation without an aggressive voluntary program . . . to reduce food consumption in this country.

If names were magic, the President's conference tomorrow that theme could be counted a success in advance. The roster begins with Herbert Hoover, whose reputation for relief at home is not, and it includes a number of first-rank "molders of public opinion" and spokesmen of agriculture and food-processing industries.

It seems to us, nevertheless, that the conference can reasonably reach only one conclusion, which may be developed in the following way: (1) We must send more food overseas. (2) The greater part of it will have to be set aside by the Government from domestic production. (3) The food can be spared comfortably and harmlessly. (4) The burden can be shared decently, however, only if the remaining supply is managed so as to prevent the quicker-footed, better-heeled, more selfish and self-indulgent of our citizens from depriving others of needed nutrition. (5) Therefore, renewed rationing of at least some foods is strongly indicated.

This newspaper relishes that idea no more than those who will condemn it most loudly. Nevertheless, few Americans would linger long over whether to stint themselves slightly or to let fellow human beings starve. That choice taken, one need hardly linger much longer over the choice between rationing and substantial injustice among our own people.

Taking both those choices, the British people have cut rations below the low wartime levels. Granted, their motive may not be wholly altruistic. If not, there is certainly a valid self-interest in doing what little one may to abate a sweeping hunger-born hatred, and to follow through by prescribing equality of sacrifice among our own people.

5, 10, 15, 20 . . . ?

Mr. Bowles contends that the cost of living need rise only something like 5 per cent from adjustments under the new wage-price policy. Reserve Board Chairman Eccles thinks 10 per cent. It seems one of the more barren and less edifying provinces of controversy, in spite of the new marriage of minds between Messrs. Bowles and Snyder, whose previous alienation was epic.

Even 5 per cent would do grave hurt to some millions of low-income and fixed-income Americans; there is no point in teasing them now with hopes and fears about their fate. There is less point because this particular unsavory pudding will soon be proved, anyhow. The question which remains to be settled is how strongly it will be flavored with the bitter herbs that NAM, AFL, CIO and some of the farm organizations want to put in it.

Not that the policy is not clear enough in intention. Hold prices as near as may be to present levels, adjusting where necessary to sustain enough profits to bring forth expanding production. At the same time, says Mr. Bowles, hold a strong line against the strongest inflationary influence on prices: "If we go beyond the present wage pattern, we will get in trouble."

Capital! However, will the Administration really hold fast on wages and prices and even get plenty tough if and where needed? Can Mr. Bowles urge 20 per cent raises for Federal employees and stiffer ones than that for first-line officials, and still hold the present "pattern"? Can Mr. Snyder assure all and sundry that the Government has not really restored wartime powers over wages without having ambitious union leaders take him at his word?

With considerable evidence to support himself, Mr. Eccles has wagered a modest 10 per cent that the official Federal anti-inflationists are speaking twice as well as they will accomplish. Undoubtedly, he himself hopes he will lose the bet. It will take much more than brave talk, however, to prevent the collection of 10, 15, 20 . . .

"A Greater Criminal Than Krupp"

Since the days of Kaiser Wilhelm, and even before, the name of Krupp has been a symbol of the German military machine. Now the world learns that there was an even greater arms maker behind the Nazi juggernaut, an obscure but mighty figure named Friedrich Flick. He is described by American investigators as "a behind-the-scenes force far bigger than Krupp . . . a greater criminal than Krupp."

This newly discovered merchant of death belongs among the major war criminals, not only because he helped arm Hitler's forces of aggression, but because his empire was built on theft—from the seized Czech, French and Russian properties and from Jewish-owned plants acquired at forced sale. As an accomplice of the Nazis in their looting of Europe, and a major exploiter of slave labor, his record ranks with the records of the 22 men now on trial at Nuremberg.

So why isn't Friedrich Flick brought to trial as a war criminal? Through a series of shabby evasions, no Krupp is being brought to justice, nor is any other German industrialist or arms maker. Our investigators have tracked down a prize specimen, whose trial at the earliest possible moment would assure the world that this time the Allies really mean to burn out the roots of chronic German militarism and aggression.

The suggestion is made that Congress strike off a brand-new line of medals, in the shape of five rooms with bath.

Undue Concession on Intangibles

The House committee was justified in eliminating from the intangible tax bill the provision for a levy on the income from corporate stocks, for this would have been a clear case of double taxation. However, there is little if any justification for its action in cutting in two the 8 per cent tax proposed on the income from other intangibles.

Despite the clamor against the 8 per cent rate, a moment's analysis will show that it would be a modest and reasonable tax. Take a security with a par value of $100, yielding an average return of 4 per cent. Eight per cent of 4 per cent is an actual tax rate of 32 1/100ths per cent, or 32 cents on each $100 of principal.

The old rate, when intangibles had to be assessed on the same basis as other property, was 2.75 per cent in St. Louis, or $2.75 on the $100. An 8 per cent rate on income would thus be less than one-eighth the present tax on par value, or a reduction of around 88 per cent. Then why the reluctance to apply the 8 per cent on income authorized by the new Constitution?

There is another count against the reduction to 4 per cent. It is indicated from the hearings at Jefferson City that the yield from such a rate would probably be even less than the annual return of $2,250,000, as of 1944, from the old tax.

The main reason for the change in the taxing system was, of course, to put it on a reasonable basis and end the wholesale evasions practiced under the old plan, but the angle of revenue cannot be forgotten. Isn't it rather poor business to reduce the rate so low that the yield will actually decrease as a result? The local districts which will receive this revenue should have something to say about that.

The committee's decision is not the final word. There ought to be some vigorous protests on the floor of the House against this unduly great concession to holders of intangibles.

The one-way-street plan for St. Louis needs a green light.

AND IF THEY DID WRECK IT —

The Ruthless Vandalism of Rats

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Joseph Mitchell, in the New Yorker of April 29, 1944

The rats of New York are quicker-witted than those on any other continent. They know that any man who has not made a study of their habits. Even so, they spend most of their lives in a state of extreme anxiety, the black rats dreading the brown and both species dreading human beings.

Away from their nests, they are usually on the edge of hysteria. They will severely bite babies (there was an epidemic of this a year or so ago in a row of tenements in the Wallabout neighborhood in Brooklyn), and they will bite sleeping adults, but ordinarily they flee from people.

If hemmed in, and sometimes if too suddenly come upon, they will attack. They fight savagely and blindly, in the manner of mad dogs; they bare their teeth and leap about every which way snarling and snapping and clawing the air. A full-grown black rat, when desperate, can jump three feet horizontally and make a vertical leap of two feet two inches, and a brown rat is nearly as spry.

Like Spooks in the Shadows

As a rule, New York rats are nocturnal. They rove in the streets in many neighborhoods, but only after the sun has set. They steal along as quietly as spooks in the shadows close to the building line or in the gutters, peering this way and that, sniffing, quivering, conscious every moment of all that is going on around them.

The average person rarely sees one. When he does it is in a dark alleyway. Anyone who has been confronted by a rat in the blackness of a Manhattan dawn and has seen it whirl and slink away, its claws rasping against the pavement, thereafter understands fully why this beast has been for centuries a symbol of the Judas and the stool pigeon, of soullessness in general. Veteran exterminators say that even they are unable to be calm around rats.

Rats are almost as fecund as germs. In New York, under fair conditions, they bear from three to five times a year in litters of from five to 22. There is a record of seven litters in seven months from a single captured pair. The period of gestation is between 21 and 25 days. They grow rapidly and are able to breed when 4 months old.

"Wiseest, Most Cynical Beasts"

The span of life is between three and five years although now and then one may live somewhat longer; a rat at 4 is older than a man at 90. Exterminators refer to old rats as Moby Dicks. "Rats that survive to the age of 4 are the wisest and the most cynical beasts on earth," one exterminator says. "A trap means nothing to them, no matter how skillfully set. They just kick it around until it snaps; then they eat the bait. And they can detect poisoned bait a yard off. I believe some of them can read."

In fighting the rat, exterminating companies use a wide variety of traps, gases and poisons. One of the largest is the Guarantee Exterminating Company ("America's Pied Piper"), at 500 Fifth Avenue. Its head is E. R. Jennings, a second-generation exterminator; his father started the business in Chicago in 1888. Mr. Jennings says:

"Most good exterminators despise rat jobs because they know that exterminating by itself is ineffective. You can kill all the

"The Belaguered City," by Alfred Hoyt Bill. (Alfred A. Knopf, New York.)

Richmond from 1861 to 1865, the beleaguered city whose story is here told, was not a nice place to be at such a time. There was a war going on and Richmond was in the middle of it. That war, as it affected the capital of the Confederacy, was a drab and dreadful thing with little of glory and less of saving grace. The city, as Mr. Bill describes it, was the sufferer from war at its worst under conditions of confusion and incompetence that could not have been much worse.

Mr. Bill's information, gleaned from contemporary sources, newspapers, advertisements, diaries, letters and official documents, deals in a matter-of-fact way with day-by-day conditions as it may well be believed they existed, without benefit of the perspective that may be made to invest war and siege with highlights of heroism and nobility, or even glamour. His recital, from facts taken as he found them, is without glorification or dramatization except as starkness has a drama of its own.

The author, foreseeing that there might be complaint of undue prominence given to the shortcomings of the people and their Government, hastens to say that the emphasis placed upon these shortcomings is in itself a tribute to the steadfastness and courage of the people. He says of them that their triumph over their discontent, disappointment and discouragement at the selfishness, bungling and mismanagement from which they suffered almost as severely as from the acts of their enemies was no small part of their achievement that made those four terrible years in Richmond one of the most splendid episodes in American history.

That is one way of saying something nice about the South, but it is not the way the South likes best or the way it has been said by friendlier historians than Mr. Bill. Not that Mr. Bill is necessarily unfriendly, but there are Southerners who will say that he went looking for the shortcomings and faults in the Confederate camp, and when he found them he told about them with something like relish.

It is asking a good deal of Southerners, even at this late date, to like it when they are told that their Government was one great improvisation from top to bottom, that the people were without knowledge of war; to be told of the inflation joined with scarcity that sent prices soaring, of profiteering, black markets, favoritism, corruption, arrogance and ineptitude.

Maybe so, many Southerners will say, but why throw it up to them now? Some of them may go as far as to say Mr. Bill is a Damyankee.

WALTER LIPPMANN

The Russian Hypnosis

THE one certain way, it seems to me, to misunderstand everything is to become so hypnotized by the power of Russia that the capacity of independent judgment and initiative is lost.

There is, to be sure, no doubt that the Russian power is formidable, and little doubt, I think, that the rulers of the Soviet Union are not concentrating their effort on internal development, but are persistently extending their power outward into Europe and Asia.

Using the leverage of the Communist parties in France and in other countries, they are inhibiting measures for the solidarity of Western Europe which are indispensable if there is to be a revival of Western Europe.

Their intervention in the Middle East is not marked by any great concern to provide an orderly transition from the imperialism which is antiquated to that independence for which the native populations are, with their poverty, their illiteracy and their primitive social system, so poorly prepared.

And in the Far East their attitude can hardly be described as that of a cordial and active partner in the extension of a complex task of helping China to achieve unity and independence.

Fashion of the Moment.

Nevertheless, it is one thing to recognize the situation, and quite another to be hypnotized by it. We are hypnotized by it when, in considering American policy, we reduce the problem, which is grave and complicated, to the question of whether we are appeasing or resisting the Russian expansion.

It is fashionable at the moment to put the issue in this simple form. But no good can come of it. No sound and effective American policy can be developed by men who let their judgment be hypnotized by the notion that we must choose between yielding to the Russians in all these disputed matters or resisting them all along the line.

That will lead only to squandering our influence in empty gestures and ineffective words, or to entanglement in a conflict which it is easier to get drawn into than it would be to evade it.

For what is being proposed is, as a matter of fact, that the United States resist the Soviet expansion, that it stop "appeasing" the Russians, by underwriting every one who opposes them. This is sometimes called being tough with Russia.

Basic Fallacy.

It would certainly be tough on the United States. For it would commit and entangle us in China, in Southern Asia, the Middle East, the Balkans, involve us with all manner of reactionary and obsolete forces, and deprive us of any constructive initiative of our own. It would almost certainly fail, and our prestige and our influence would be deeply impaired.

The basic fallacy of the hypothesis is that they are thinking only of the expanding Russian power. But the problem to which American policy has to be directed is not merely the expansion of the Russian power. It is the same time the contraction of the British power, the weakness of Europe, and the weakness of China. If it were not for the internal weakness of the British Empire, of Western Europe, and of China, the limits of the Russian expansion would be obviously fixed and readily maintained.

That is what is usually forgotten by those who want the United States to get tough and stop "ap-

220 STUDENTS GET ST. LOUIS U. DEGREES

The Rev. H. B. Crimmins, S.J., Speaker at Medical, Dental Schools Commencement.

(Picture in Everyday Magazine.) The St. Louis University Schools of Medicine and Dentistry held commencement exercises today awarding degrees to 220 students from 30 states and two foreign countries. Commencement in the armed services were received by 118 of the graduates.

The Rev. Harry B. Crimmins, S.J., former president of the university, who served as chaplain of the Seventeenth General Hospital, United States Army, delivered the principal address at commencement exercises at the university gymnasium, 3672 West Pine boulevard.

Termining World War I "a terribly wasted war," Father Crimmins said the millions who fought and died were expressing the ideal that if life is to be honorable and decent, every human being must be as interested in assuring the rights of his neighbor as in vindicating his own rights.

"Had the leaders of the world grasped this idealism," he said, "the sickness of the world would not have been unto death and there would have been no World War II. But they failed. They made progress a god and self-expression a god and the state a god. So again between 1914 and 1946 millions of American youths went off to service beyond the seas."

Asserting that the war was over before we began to realize its meaning, Father Crimmins said, "We were amazed to discern that its destructiveness had not brought about the concord and harmony between nations as had been promised."

He told the graduates that America must be not only the arsenal of democracy, but also its "impregnable bulwark."

The commencement exercise began with a mass at College Church, which was celebrated by the Rev. Patrick J. Holloran, S.J., president of the university. Bishop Gerald P. O'Hara of Savannah and Atlanta, Ga., preached the sermon, stressing the importance of the graduates' service to their fellow men.

Father Holloran, in a speech at the gymnasium, outlined plans for expansion of the university's facilities, particularly as they apply to the Schools of Medicine and Dentistry. He pointed out that the physical development is correlated with the internal changes which must be made.

These internal changes he listed as the development of changed emphasis upon such subjects as tropical and industrial medicine and public health; development of new programs in the care of the aged and chronically sick; modernization of the school's pediatric program, and changes in the medical curriculum with increasing emphasis upon the integration of the scientific and clinical subjects with the clinical applied subjects.

One hundred and twenty-four degrees of doctor of medicine were awarded and 96 degrees of doctor of dental science. The graduates awarded commissions in the armed services, 84 were commissioned first lieutenants in the Army Medical Corps, 22 as lieutenants, junior grade, in the Naval Reserve Medical Corps, and 12 as lieutenants, junior grade, in the Naval Reserve Dental Corps.

Thirty-nine of the graduates are residents of the St. Louis area, 11 being doctors and 22 dentists.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

A PROFUSION of candles lighted a background of wondrously fern and white flowers in the chancel of Central Presbyterian Church last night for the wedding of Miss Jayne Alden Magoon to Chief Warrant Officer Kenneth A. Taylor, on terminal leave from the Army. The Rev. Dr. Benjamin Franklin Hall performed the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. William L. Magoon, parents of the bride, gave a reception at their home, 5 Ridgeway, Clayton.

The bride's white duchess satin gown had a wide satin bertha at the neckline and a double satin peplum below the low waist. The skirt, very full in front, extended into a fan-shaped train from the point of the bodice in back. She wore a three-quarter length veil attached to an orange blossom coronet and carried white orchids and stephanotis on a prayer book.

White mouseline de soie over crepe was fashioned into gowns for the maid of honor, Miss Doris Eleanor Magoon, sister of the bride, and the bridesmaid, Miss Mildred Taylor, sister of the bride. The tight crepe bodices were adorned with a bertha of the mouseline de soie which also formed cap sleeves and a peplum of the material which was caught into a large bustle bow. The maid of honor carried a bouquet of red and white spilt carnations and the bridesmaid a bouquet of red carnations.

Members of Mr. Adams' family will arrive later next week. Coming from East Lansing, Mich., are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milton P. Adams, and their daughter, Miss Marilyn Adams, a student at Michigan State College, who will be maid of honor. Other out-of-town guests will be his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Sharp of Oak Manor, Grand Rapids, and his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Roger W. Adams of Royal Oak, Mich., and the Roger Adams' son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Finley of Louisville, Ky.

Parties for Miss Gore include two showers given by Mrs. William Gerner and Miss Ann Widmer, who will be bridesmaids at the wedding. Another bridesmaid, Miss Shirley Chase, will be hostess at a shower next Wednesday, Mr. and Mrs. E. Herbert Booth, 330 West Lockwood avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Watson, 207 S. Second street, Webster Groves, will be hosts of the bride-elect.

Have also planned parties, the dates for which have not been set, Mr. and Mrs. Adams will give the rehearsal dinner at the Greenbrier Country Club March 8. The prospective bridegroom received his discharge last week at Camp Atterbury, Ind. A corporal, he recently returned from duty in Europe. For his best man he will have John Kobs of East Lansing, Miss Gore's uncle, Morris S. Kissel, will be one of the groomsmen. Others will be announced later.

Mr. and Mrs. James Clark Street Jr. and their 3-month-old daughter, Judith Anne, will arrive in St. Louis today from Fort Worth, Tex., where Mr. Street teaches at Texas Christian University. They will be guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Clark Street, 36 Kingsway place, for the duration of the university's spring vacation.

Out-of-town guests here for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hulman of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Leans of Moberly, Mo., and Dr. and Mrs. Charles Keeling of Kansas City, Mo.

After a week in Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor will live with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. James Clark Street Jr. and their 3-month-old daughter, Judith Anne, will arrive in St. Louis today from Fort Worth, Tex., where Mr. Street teaches at Texas Christian University. They will be guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Clark Street, 36 Kingsway place, for the duration of the university's spring vacation.

TO BE WED. MARCH 16. FOREST MYERS of Fulton, Mo., have sent invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Marjorie Myers, and Arthur Kemp Hume Jr., to take place at the home of T. Watson Street, March 16, at First Presbyterian Church, Fulton. Cards were ordered for a reception after the ceremony at Fulton Country Club. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. T. Watson Street. Miss John Raeburn Green II (Frances Van Sant), who was married Feb. 9 in Fulton, will be maid of honor and Miss Peggy Hume of Fulton and Miss Mary Kathryn Richards of Webster Groves will be bridesmaids.

Mr. Howell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur K. Howell, 6336 Pershing, will be best man. Mr. and Mrs. Howell will be hosts of the bride-elect.

BRADLEY URGES HIGHER DISABILITY BENEFITS

Asks House Committee to Approve New Schedule Affecting 115,000 Veterans.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)—Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chief of the Veterans' Administration, today urged enactment of a law benefiting more than 115,000 disabled veterans.

It would put into effect a schedule prepared in 1945 under which virtually all claimants would receive quick ratings for disability pensions, Bradley explained in a statement prepared for the House Veterans' Committee.

The schedule would be effective the first day of the month after the law is enacted.

All future cases would be based on it no matter when filed. Those now on the rolls would be reviewed under its terms.

An estimated 100,000 World War II veterans and 15,000 of the previous war would receive automatic increases averaging $17.25 a month retroactive to the date the new schedule is effective, Bradley explained.

Bradley said the schedule was lower in a few cases than the 1933 rating list now in effect, but he declared the bill "will not, of itself, require any reduction of pension being paid any disabled veteran, because . . . only increased ratings and awards will be effective the first day of the month after its enactment." He estimated it would cost $26,000,000 a year.

Bradley also gave his backing to liberalization of the service insurance law "to more nearly conform with commercial policies." The proposed revision would:

1. Let anybody be named beneficiary.
2. Allow lump sum settlements.
3. Permit total disability protection.

The administrator also urged a third law, adding $1,000,000 to the $500,000 revolving fund for non-interest loans of up to $100 to disabled veterans starting vocational training.

TWO ST. LOUISANS DECORATED

Two St. Louis area men have been decorated for meritorious military service, it was announced today.

Lt. Col. Eric A. Storz, Army administrative medical officer, who lives at 39 Magnolia drive, received the Legion of Merit, Pfc. Norman Kaahue, 2308 North and South road, Overland, has been awarded the Bronze Star medal.

SCULPTURE EXHIBIT BY MARIE TAYLOR AND ANNE SCOTT

Work of St. Louis Artists Being Shown at Eleanor Smith Galleries.

Nine pieces of sculpture by Anne Scott, seven by Marie Taylor and eight oil paintings by Miss Taylor compose the current exhibition at the Eleanor Smith Galleries, 393 North Euclid avenue. Both St. Louisans who have exhibited previously, the artists have studied at Washington University and in New York. Mrs. Scott with Jose de Creeft and Miss Taylor with Jerry Farnsworth. The show opened Monday and will close March 8.

The sculpture ranges from Miss Taylor's "Clown Head," almost of heroic size, to Mrs. Scott's three diminutive "Garden Figures," which are baby torsos intended for lawn fountains. In an exhibition marked by simplicity and by craftsmanship along conventional lines, "Saint," cut in white Carrara marble by Mrs. Scott, possesses the same qualities in such a measure as to arrest the attention of the gallery visitor. The piece has already been sold.

"The Wrestlers," by Miss Taylor, is notable for being so nearly carved in symmetry as to constitute an abstractionist design. The same sculptor has gone to an opposite extreme in "Mantled Woman," made from a worn granite field stone with a minimum of carving and yet with a surprisingly life-like effect.

The paintings comprise still life and landscapes. Miss Taylor displays varied luminous effects in "The Road," "Spacial Landscape" and "Olive Trees at St. Jean."

WALDEMAR C. KEITEL DIES

Waldemar C. Keitel, vice president of the Columbia Oil Co., 3419 Papin street, died yesterday of a heart ailment at his home, 6128 Westminster place. He was 58 years old.

Surviving are his wife, a daughter, Emily Caroline, and three brothers. Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p.m. Saturday from the Robert J. Ambuster undertaking establishment, 6633 Clayton road, with burial in Friedens Evangelical Cemetery.

What Is Happening to Our Wheat?

A THOUSAND wheat elevators in the Dakotas, Minnesota, Nebraska and Montana are plugged, which means that they are so full of wheat they cannot take any more. The number of carloads of grain moved in January was close to the record all-time high set for the same month in 1944.

Yet Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson announces that commitments of wheat for Europe will be short 150,000 tons in February and short even more in March.

With the need in the rest of the world so desperate, Secretary Anderson's announcement has a kind of calm, casual sound as though this deficit were no great concern of his. Unfortunately, it is typical of the attitude in the Department of Agriculture.

Last summer, policy-makers in the department were busy saying that the food shortage in Europe would surely not be as serious as some alarmists said; and that since the estimates were certainly exaggerated, there was no need to be too worried over preparations to meet such a shortage. There were others who foresaw the present crisis but they were overruled. Certain conscientious public servants resigned because they could not endure the Pollyanna approach in the Department of Agriculture.

Near-Record Carloadings.

We are now witnessing the back-passing stage, with agricultural statistics to unload the blame for current failures. It has several times been intimated that lack of transportation is the reason why shipments abroad have fallen below the promise made.

But the Association of American Railroads points to carloadings of grain of near-record volume. For January of this year, the figure was 207,154 cars, which compares with 236,825 in January of 1944, 460 cars of wheat were moved in 20 days. The railroad association insists that when Government grain is made available for shipment abroad, it is hauled.

What is happening then to this priceless stuff so badly needed to combat the world's hunger? Make no mistake, either they are a powerful group—the farmers and, with them, the handlers and processors of grain. During the war, when an acute shortage of corn to make alcohol actually threatened the war production program, it was possible to take only the most timid and tentative steps to end hoarding of the farms.

One target of the lobbyists is the system of Government subsidies which, during the war, were used to stimulate farm production and yet make it possible to keep farm prices within bounds. Chester Bowles, who now has wartime powers as the new director of the revived Office of Economic Stabilization, says that continuation of these subsidies is absolutely essential to price control.

It is up to Congress to serve notice on the speculators that there will be no price rise. And it's up to Secretary Anderson to cut through the Government tangle and get the wheat to the ports for shipment.

What salary

should a man of my age make?" The more ambitious the man, the more often he asks himself this question.

Actually there is no ready answer. Age alone, except as it seasons judgment with experience, has little to do with a man's earning power. This is proven by hundreds of young St. Louis businessmen who are successful far beyond their years.

The many rising young men BOATMEN'S has been privileged to serve through the years have set their own salary with their own Ambition, Ability and Action on the job. Self-reliant to an extreme degree, they have also been wise enough to rely on seasoned counsel from an experienced banker.

BOATMEN'S friendly officers are interested in your success . . . ready to supplement your talents with helpful guidance in financial affairs. It's not the size of your salary but the promise of your future that counts most at this friendly bank which for 98 years has helped chart the careers of successful men.

POLICE PENSION BILL DROPPED BY SPONSOR

Kiely Says Officers Want Six-Day Work Week Measure, Instead.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 28—Abandonment of a House bill setting the minimum pension for St. Louis policemen at $125 a month with the hope of spurring a Senate committee into action on a measure providing a six-day week for St. Louis policemen was announced today by Representative Joseph P. Kiely of St. Louis.

Following Kiely's announcement, the House Pensions Committee voted to kill the pension measure in response to a request by Kiely. In addition to Kiely, the bill was sponsored by Representatives Harry Schendel and John T. Ahern of St. Louis.

Kiely explained that individual members of the Police Department had urged dropping the pension bill and concentrating efforts on securing passage of the six-day work-week measure.

Belief that the Senate committee possessing the bill for a shorter working week was withholding action until the pension bill had been disposed of was expressed by policemen who had talked to him, Kiely said.

"If there is any truth in that," Kiely asserted, "this dropping of the pension bill should force action on the six-day bill."

The Senate Municipal Corporations Committee, of which Senator William J. Studt of St. Louis is chairman, has had the shorter work week bill since Oct. 25, two days after passage of the measure by the House.

When the pension bill was introduced last November, Kiely said that it was designed to assuage one of the sore spots causing unrest and dissatisfaction on the Police Force. He explained then that there were inequalities in the present pension system with the benefits often varying $150 a month. A former chief of police received as much as $3200 a year in retirement pay.

Terming the present system of two days off each month another sore spot, Kiely said the policemen who had conferred with him preferred the shorter working week measure over the adjustment of the pension system and believed a choice had to be made to be certain of getting at least one of the grievances satisfied.

ment and barred from holding any important position because of their Nazi-militaristic tendencies.

BRITISH FEAR MANY GERMANS MAY DIE

HERFORD, Germany, Feb. 28 (UP)—The vanguard of 1,500,000 Germans to be expelled from Poland arrived in the British occupation zone yesterday, further complicating the food situation which earlier in the day caused British headquarters to order rations cut.

The first group of newcomers numbered 1330. Under arrangement with Russian authorities, others will be deported from Poland to the British zone at the rate of 1500 a day from now on. (The Associated Press said Field Marshal Lord Montgomery has reported that large numbers of Germans soon will be living under starvation conditions and many probably will die. His report to the British Government said food riots and other internal disturbances are to be expected unless extra food can be supplied.)

The British Press Association said Cabinet members feel "that Germany must be looked upon as coming at the end of the world's food queue" with the liberated countries, India, and other lands in which Britain has a special interest, coming ahead.

It was understood secret orders have been issued to British army officers to tighten security measures in case of trouble stemming from the drastic cut in rations for the 21,000,000 civilians in the British zone.

A staff officer at British headquarters said at a press conference that the cut in rations to a point considered below the bare subsistence level was "due to advances received during the last few days."

"These were comparatively unexpected," the officer said. "In view of them, the position is very fluid and we are unable to make any long-term plan. It is impossible to say whether the position will further deteriorate."

He refused to comment when asked if the shortages resulted from reductions of expected supplies by the Cereals Board in Board in Washington or by the United States Government.

State Senate Invited to Dinner. JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 23 (AP)—Senator H. R. Williams, Senate Republican floor leader, asked the Senate yesterday to have dinner next Tuesday night at a capital city hotel at the invitation of E. J. Short of Springfield. "Mr. Short is a friend of mine and not a lobbyist so you have nothing to fear on that score," Williams explained.

DEVIL'S ISLAND PRISON CLOSED, FRENCH DISCLOSE

Other Penal Institutions in French Guiana Being Abandoned.

By JOHN A. THALE
The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio, Copyright, 1946.

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands, Feb. 28.—French officials now reveal that the infamous Devil's Island penitentiary has been abandoned and that other institutions in French Guiana for criminal deportees are being closed.

Lt. Col. Xavier Sainz of the French Medical Corps told the Second West Indian Conference here that "on that island, which has known the agony of many men, herds and flocks alone are now to be seen."

Many terrible tales have been told of the pain, loneliness and horror suffered by men sent to the dungeons of Devil's Island, its most famous prisoner was Capt. Alfred Dreyfuss, French Army officer whose conviction of treason stirred all France before he finally was exonerated.

WELLES ASSAULT 'BLUE BOOK' BLAST AGAINST ARGENTINA

Previously informing the Brazilian Foreign Office, which was taken by surprise.

Joint Action Urged.

The charges contained in the blue book have been known to this government for a considerable period. The State Department is determined to strengthen the inter-American system, rather than pursue its unilateral campaign against the present Argentine regime. It would have communicated these charges to the governments of the other American republics for the purpose of official consultation, and of joint action, long before the commencement of the electoral campaign in Argentina.

Evidence of the success of interventionist propaganda that the United States should disregard the sovereign rights of weaker peoples whenever it sees fit are accumulating. They are even apparent in a recent report of the Foreign Policy Association, where such statements as these are made:

"The United States must face the fact that as the great American power it has responsibilities to the inter-American system that go beyond those of the other nations. While it has on various occasions spoken out strongly, it has not yet been able to follow up its strong language by action."

Policy Called Imperialist.

Such statements mean that the United States should revert to the fatal policy of the first quarter of the present century, when this country continually intervened, and frequently by armed force, in the other independent republics of the Americas.

That course would destroy the foundations on which the good-neighbor policy and the inter-American system rest: recognition of the sovereign equality of all the American states; respect for the independence of all of the peoples of the Americas; and full co-operation in all questions which affect the peace, security and welfare of the New World.

The ideology and the practices of the Perons and of their followers undoubtedly represent a major danger to the well-being of the New World. But there is scarcely a thinking Latin American outside of the ranks of the interventionist propagandists who will not insist that United States policy has done far more to increase that danger than to dissipate it.

There is no valid distinction which can be drawn between our recent policy and imperialism. It is the same policy as that recently followed by the Soviet Union in eastern Europe and in the Balkans. It is a policy which asserts the right of a major power, solely because of its strength, to dictate the political determination of its weaker neighbors. It can only end in the destruction of the sovereign liberties of small states. It is tantamount to the proclamation by the United States of a sphere of influence within the New World.

MARRIAGE LICENSE RECORD

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)—Discharged service men are giving wedding bells a record ring. Home from the wars, they traveled to the altar in such numbers that last month set a new high in marriage licenses issued for a January, jumping 48 per cent over January 1945, the Census Bureau reported last night.

The bureau, in a survey covering 91 cities with populations above 100,000, said issuance of licenses fell off only in places where Army and Navy installations closed or reduced their personnel.

OPA REQUEST FOR RECORDS OF RALSTON PURINA DENIED
An order sustaining a motion by the Ralston Purina Co. to strike from a list of interrogatories filed by the Office of Price Administration a request for records of sales of animal and poultry feeds was issued yesterday by United States District Judge
George H. Moore.
The OPA, in its $3,000,000 damage suit against the company for alleged overcharges, had requested files and records of sales and shipments of feeds dating from August 20, 1942. The company, in its motion for relief from this request, said it would cost approximately $35,000 to comply.
Judge Moore made no comment in his order. George L. Robinson, chief enforcement attorney for the OPA here, said the OPA's request was merely a preliminary step in the action and the denial of the request would not affect the Government's prosecution of the case.

Chicago Traction Deal Approved.
CHICAGO, Feb. 28 (AP)—Approval of the city purchase plan for the Chicago surface lines and elevated properties as well as the transit authority's plan of unification and reorganization of the Chicago traction properties was confirmed today by Federal Judge Michael L. Igoe. Judge Igoe issued a memorandum earlier this month approving the unification plan and a purchase price of $75,000,000 for the surface lines properties and $12,000,000 for the elevated lines.

ST. LOUIS U. HOSPITAL UNIT STAFF HONORED

Dr. Harrison H. Shoulders Praises Work of Army Group at Dinner.

(Picture in Everyday Magazine.)

Faculty members of St. Louis University School of Medicine, who composed the Seventh General Hospital Unit, and the unit's officers and nurses were honored last night at a dinner given by the university at Hotel Statler.

About 85 members of the unit, which was sponsored by St. Louis University, were faculty members of the school of medicine, and most of the 89 nurses attached to the hospital were recruited from St. Louis hospitals and nursing schools. Other medical alumni who served in the Army or Navy, but not with the Seventh, were also guests of the school.

Operating as an evacuation hospital within a few miles of the front, its high standards of efficient medical care of the battle wounded brought the Seventh citations on three different occasions for superior performance of exceptionally difficult tasks and outstanding devotion to duty.

Dr. Shoulders Speaks. The principal speaker, Dr. Harrison H. Shoulders, of Nashville, Tenn., president-elect of the American Medical Association, praised their work and their part in the winning of the war, but reminded the 586 guests that the forces which caused the war still are active in the world.

"The preservation of the freedom for which you fought and sacrificed is still a challenging task," he said. "You will recall that the aggressors in this conflict first accomplished a destruction of freedom within their own national boundaries and then began their attempt at the destruction of freedom in other lands." One of the forces which are challenging the freedom of the medical profession, he intimated, is the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill. This bill, now pending in Congress, would provide for compulsory health insurance and government guarantee of medical care, expansion of hospitals and increased medical research and education.

"The bill is paraded under the banner of welfare," he asserted. "The movements abroad which terminated in the establishment of a dictatorship were paraded as welfare movements. You will find too many people thinking of the bill in terms of money or services delivered by a government bureau or agent without recognizing or acknowledging that some of them constitute a threat to the freedom for which you fought."

Chaplain Gives Unit's History. The Rev. Harry B. Crimmins, who resigned as president of the university in November, 1942, to serve as chaplain for the hospital, traced the history and activities of the unit from the time it was formed in August, 1940, through the North African and Italian campaigns to its deactivation last October. Father Crimmins entered the Army with the rank of second lieutenant and rose to a captaincy.

The hospital's executive officer, Col. Curtis H. Lohr, superintendent of St. Louis County Hospital, presented the hospital personnel and praised their work.

The Rev. Alphonse M. Schwitala, S.J., dean of the St. Louis University School of Medicine, presented the school of medicine, provided other speakers included Maj. Gen. George F. Lull of Scranton, Pa., retired Deputy Surgeon General of the Army, and Capt. Francis J. Brackland, former dean of the School of Medicine of Loyola University at Chicago and now head of the division of psychiatry, bureau of personnel, Navy Department. They described the effect of the educator on Army and Navy medicine.

The university paid tribute to the 24 alumni who were killed or died in service when Father Schwitala, S.J., read their names while their pictures were flashed upon a screen and taps was played.

President Truman congratulated the unit on its splendid work in a telegram read by Dean Schwitala.

RECEPTION FOR 10 CHINESE

A reception for 10 Chinese, who have arrived in St. Louis to study American industrial methods, will be held at 6:30 o'clock this evening at Hotel Jefferson. The meeting is sponsored by the Foreign Trade Bureau of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce and the China Institute in America.

The group is part of a delegation of 1000 Chinese who will remain in this country for a year.

LIMAS WITH HAM HOCK

MAN-WHAT FLAVOR!

FOR good eating, for good nourishment, here's a flavor combination you can't beat! Big butter-tender dried Limas from California are the secret. These savory beans make it rich in protein, in iron and B vitamins.

TO SERVE 4, soak 1½ cups dried Seaside Limas 5 hours in 3 cups cold water. Simmer a ham hock in 3 cups water 2 or 3 hours till tender. An hour before dinner, add Limas with their soaking water, cook 30 min. Add a diced carrot, sliced onion, 3 turnips cubed; season and continue cooking until tender. Remove ham hock, cut off bits of ham, add to beans.

MORSE SEEKS ACTION ON COURTS-MARTIAL

Plans Fight in Senate to End Delay on Resolution for Investigation.

By GEORGE H. HALL, A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—Senator Wayne L. Morse (Rep.), Oregon, said yesterday he expected to begin a fight on the Senate floor soon to get action on his resolution to investigate Army and Navy court-martial systems. When he introduced the resolution three months ago, he said, "I here and now allege injustice is rampant" in military trial procedures.

Later, Senator Pat McCarran (Dem.), Nevada, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, to which Morse's resolution was referred, introduced a resolution of his own calling for an investigation of courts-martial. The McCarran resolution was approved by the committee and is pending before the Senate Audit and Control Committee. Nothing has been done about Morse's resolution.

"I am losing patience with all this delay while many men unjustly sentenced still are in confinement," Morse told the Post-Dispatch. He said also it could be assumed the Democrats would try to sidetrack his resolution because they do not want the Republicans to control any such inquiry.

Morse's resolution calls for a special nine-man committee, while that of McCarran would have the investigation conducted by the Judiciary Committee. Morse is not a member of the Judiciary Committee.

Morse said he intended to renew efforts to obtain from the Navy Department a list of 50 cases in which excessive sentences were imposed by courts-martial. He said he had received no reply to a request made more than a month ago.

He made the same request of the Army and obtained summaries of 50 cases in which penalties ranging from death to long terms of imprisonment were reduced on review by clemency boards. This list was published in the Post-Dispatch.

Light, tender doughnuts—made with
Duff's Hot Muffin Mix
Here's something the whole family'll love... home-made doughnuts! An old-fashioned treat made the new, modern way. (See easy directions below.)

Duff's HOT MUFFIN MIX

Dozens of other good things too!

BREAKFAST MUFFINS: Add 1 1/2 c. cool water, fold in 1/2 c. at time. DO NOT BEAT. Batter should be slightly lumpy. Bake (400°F.) 15-20 min.

SURPRISE MUFFINS: Follow directions for breakfast muffins. Drop tsp. marmalade, jam, jelly or cheese spread on muffins before baking.

JUST ADD WATER—that's all!

FRUIT COBBLER: Add 3/4 cup cool water slowly to 1/2 box Hot Muffin Mix. Roll to form stiff dough. Roll about 1/2" thick. Arrange on top of cooked deep-dish fruit pie. Bake 20-25 min. (400°F.)

COFFEE CAKES: Before popping breakfast muffins into oven, cover each with a sugared topping.

"DOUGHNUT DIRECTIONS:" Add enough water to the mix to make a dough that can be rolled and cut. Chill dough and roll 1/4" thick. Cut and fry in deep fat at 375°. Turn once, careful not to pierce doughnuts. Drain and dust with sugar and cinnamon.

as disclosed in history." He continued:

"Silly to Ignore Hazard."

"It would be silly to ignore the hazard. It would be even sillier to ignore vindicated hopes. The amazing thing at London is not that there were areas of disagreement, but that the areas of agreement were so vast and so significant."

"In my opinion, I repeat because it is so dreadfully important that the United Nations must be made to succeed if we are to avoid unspeakable catastrophe in this atomic age when decisive war may be waged in minutes instead of years and when the first casualty list may be the last."

"To those who are already earnestly suggesting substitutes, I suggest that if the U.N.O. compact, as a starter, cannot command the agreement and co-operation essential to success, then any more ambitious program would obviously multiply these obstacles. Any less ambitious program would die of pernicious, international anemia."

"This charter clearly has its imperfections. We must be constantly alert to opportunities for its improvement. It is helpful that the earnest friends of peace should press these discussions. But it seems clear to me that we must first learn to live with what we have. It seems clear to me that our challenge is to make the United Nations work. It is a particular challenge to three of them, still more particular, it is an individual challenge to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and to our own United States."

The London conference, Vandenberg declared, turned the United Nations from "a blue-print into a going concern. It turned an ideal into a reality. On Jan. 10, we had a 'scrap of paper.' In 37 days we gave it life. The supreme need, in the name of flesh and blood and human hearts and hopes, is that it shall not return to the status of a 'scrap of paper.'"

Credits and Debits.

Listing a credit and debit balance of accomplishments, Vandenberg gave these U.N.O. gains:

1. Organized successfully.
2. Created an international atomic energy commission.
3. Backed the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration in its fight against famine.
4. Offered new hope to dependent peoples.
5. Refused to sanction involuntary repatriation of war refugees.
6. Pledged encouragement of a world-wide free press.
7. Implemented the vital article XIV of the Charter, under which the General Assembly can recommend peaceful adjustment of any situation, regardless of origin, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare.
8. Heard four controversies, which went to the Security Council. This was "open diplomacy openly arrived at."

For the debit side of the ledger, Vandenberg had this to say:

"I confess that in this first meeting of the United Nations I missed the uplifting and sustaining zeal for a great, crusading, moral cause which seemed to imbue the earlier charter sessions at San Francisco."

"Perhaps it was because the agenda was so largely confined to the hum-drum routine of organizational details. Perhaps it was the burden of anxiety over the misgivings that are inevitable in launching a peace project which never yet has succeeded in the history of civilization; or, on the other hand, perhaps it was the accumulated tiredness which dampens ardor and easily surrenders to the expedient notion that 'all's well.'"

"Perhaps it was because, in the aftermath of war, we confront too many grim realities that are utterly at odds with the precepts of justice which we presume to defend. In any event, and whatever the cause, we are on notice that the peoples of the earth must never cease to evangelize this struggle for peace if it shall reach full flower."

"Again, I sensed at London what seemed to be too great a tendency to relapse into 'power politics, in greater or less degree, and, as some one has said, to use the United Nations as a self-serving tribune rather than as a tribunal. It will require constant, consistent, courageous guidance to keep the United Nations within the main channel of its obligations—and here again is a clear call to America always to act its traditional character for liberty and justice."

In his introduction, Vandenberg apologized for speaking before Chairman Connally had made the first report. He left little for Connally to say. The approving reception again demonstrated the political wisdom of bi-partisan representation on international missions. Vandenberg appreciably advanced the cause of world unity.

TREASURY CRACKS DOWN ON TEXTILE BLACK MARKETING

Aids Justice Department, OPA in Crack Down on Racketeering in Scarce Fabrics.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)—The Treasury has joined with the Justice Department and the Office of Price Administration in a three-cornered drive to smash a black market in textiles.

Secretary Vinson said last night the Government would crack down on racketeering in scarce fabrics with full force of its powers to prosecute and tax evasion as well as violation of price ceilings.

Declaring such illegal profiteering "affects the cost of clothing for every family in the country," Vinson said:

"It is clear that men who are greedy to lead to cheat the public by inflating prices would not hesitate to try to cheat the obligations. The Government is intent upon seeing to it that cheating is not successful."

A special staff of Internal Revenue Bureau agents has been assigned to work exclusively on textile black market violations in New York, by far the largest textile center in the nation.

They are giving special attention to above ceiling jobbers "who have intended by falsification of books and records," Vinson said.

Buyers as well as sellers of illegally over-priced goods will be hit, he said, by disallowance of the tax deductions for "business expenses" permitted for legitimate purchases.

No deduction at all will be allowed—not even for the amount over the ceiling price—if an invoice offered to substantiate a price is found to be untrue.

Under Treasury rules in general, it was explained, a taxpayer buys goods for business use at more than ceiling prices, the ceiling price ordinarily may be the above-ceiling amount is disallowed.

Vinson said fictitious invoices, often involving imaginary names and addresses, have become popular device used by black market jobbers and by their customers to substantiate their tax returns and their own ceiling prices.

If investigation of the invoices shows them to be fictitious, Vinson said, the whole amount of the purchase they reflect will be disallowed.

SUMMARY OF WHAT THE PEARL HARBOR INQUIRY DISCLOSED

naval operations in 1941, said he had appealed vainly to Washington to increase the fleet's manpower.

Adm. J. O. Richardson, chief of staff of the Pacific command until relieved by Adm. Husband E. Kimmel on Feb. 1, 1941, said he had urged President Roosevelt on Oct. 8, 1940, to transfer the fleet to the Pacific coast to prepare it for war. But Richardson said the President declined, contending that its presence in Hawaii exercised a restraining influence on Japan.

Adm. Kimmel said he had repeatedly requested reinforcements in men and arms.

Knox, Stimson Memoranda. Army and Navy documents were introduced to show that former Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox, who died in 1944, exchanged numerous memoranda early in 1941 in which they agreed that the Pearl Harbor defenses needed much strengthening to make the base secure.

Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, 1941 Army commander at Pearl Harbor, testified that he recommended an expenditure of $22,953,697 for the increased security of Hawaii but that he received only $550,000.

Adm. Richmond Kelly Turner, director of war plans in 1941, said that the fleet "within the limits of the material we had been able to provide" had been prepared for months for the sort of raid which came on Dec. 7. The fleet then consisted chiefly of six battleships, six cruisers and 12 destroyers.

There had been a "proper alert," Turner said, "but we would have defeated or largely turned aside the Japanese attack."

There were no carriers at Pearl Harbor. Two task forces, with all the fleet's carriers, had left for Wake and Midway on Nov. 28 and Dec. 5.

It was for this reason, Kimmel declared, that the battleships were concentrated in the harbor. With his carrier based planes far at sea, he said, he had to keep his capital ships where they could be protected by land-based aircraft.

Air Force Inadequate. Yet even his force of land-based planes was inadequate, Kimmel testified, for he didn't have enough patrol planes for effective reconnaissance. In fact, the committee was told by other officers, there was no written record of any Navy air search on Dec. 6.

Conflicting testimony was given, however, by V. Adm. P. N. L. Bellinger, who was in command of the Navy's patrol planes in the Pacific. He said he had sufficient aircraft to operate a distant reconnaissance north of Oahu for at least a week before the attack.

But, he said, he had never recommended a distant search to Kimmel, and he could not have instituted one without Kimmel's order. He said he never asked for the use of the Army bombers on the island for reconnaissance, although they were available under the Army-Navy joint plan.

As for personnel on Dec. 7, it was testified that 65 per cent of the Navy's battleship officer personnel and 95 per cent of the enlisted men were aboard ship. Of Army personnel, 50 per cent had been on leave the night of Dec. 6.

It was disclosed further that the Roberts Commission had made a detailed investigation of rumors of drunkenness among Army and Navy officers on Dec. 6, and that the commission concluded there was no evidence to support the charges.

Army Planes Not Ready. At Hickam Field, the Army air base adjoining Pearl Harbor, no Army aircraft were armed and equipped for combat when the Japanese arrived. They were parked three or four abreast about 10 feet apart. This had been done to make it easier to guard them against sabotage, it was explained. (Witnesses testified that there was no record of sabotage at Pearl Harbor either before, during or after the attack.)

On the whole, said Short, he in no case could have prevented the damage to the fleet, since his aircraft and anti-aircraft defense was inadequate.

Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff in 1941, denied this. He testified that if Short had been on the alert he could have prevented all but limited damage. The Hawaiian Department, Marshall contended, at that time was more nearly up to desired standards in men and machines than any other installation in the Army.

"They had sufficient men and material," he said, "to resist either an enemy raid or a more serious attack."

Testimony went into the matter of liaison between the Army and Navy commands.

Short said that the Navy was responsible for long distance reconnaissance and that he assumed that such patrols were being conducted.

Kimmel said he thought that the Army was giving him a 200-mile radar coverage. Short said his radar was able to operate only between 4 and 7 a.m. because of shortage of equipment and trained personnel.

Kimmel said he did not know the exact status of the Army alert and that neither he nor any member of his staff made an effort to learn. Army officials acknowledged they hadn't checked up on the Navy's reconnaissance, either.

Short criticized the Navy's staff work. He said Navy officers knew that the Army was on only a sabotage alert but that they took no action to correct this. They knew also, he said, that the Army interceptor command was operating only experimentally and was not "prepared to take the air immediately."

(Tomorrow: the "winds" mystery.)

PHONE OPERATOR RETIRES

Miss Josephine Desmond, who operated a telephone switchboard in St. Louis' old Federal Building in World War I and has been chief operator in the Federal Building for the last 10 years, retired today on pension. Federal employees gave a farewell party for her this afternoon at which she was given going-away gifts.

Twenty telephone operators, with whom Miss Desmond worked for many years, honored her with a farewell dinner recently at the Missouri Athletic Association. She lives with two sisters at 5920 Washington boulevard.

Possum Trot Farm

Thoughts on Eve Of Trout Season

By Leonard Hall

THERE is news this season which should certainly please the trout fishermen, those hardy souls who stand along the banks of Missouri's ice cold spring branches on the first day of March.

It makes no difference to them that the weather, as a friend of mine once put it, is so cold "that the whisky freezes on the gun barrel." Those boys are out there to catch the trout and believe me some of them do. To hear me talking about trout fishing in the third person you might think that I don't qualify as one of this strange fraternity. Nothing could be farther from the fact than this. It is true that during the war years, when a fellow had to balance his trout fishing against his bass fishing, I unhesitatingly chose the latter. Trout fishing is good fun and there is a lot of good fellowship connected with it. But in a state like Missouri where there are no natural trout streams and the trout have to be raised in hatcheries and planted in our few miles of cold water heading up at the big springs—it just isn't quite the natural sport that bass fishing is. Moreover, I have to be away for about two weeks during March and just won't be able to get down to Montauk until pretty close to the first of April. So I guess maybe there have been just a few sour grapes in this dissertation on trout up to the present point.

THE FISHERIES SECTION of the Conservation Commission advises us that production at the State Trout Hatcheries is being stepped up approximately 30 per cent this season. These trout will be stocked at Bennett Springs, Roaring River and Montauk as they have in the past. The Regulations also state, although I believe this is no different from last season, that special trout management areas outside the three state parks will include 10 miles of Current River from the edge of Montauk Park south to Cedar Grove; Greer Springs branch and its confluence with Eleven Point River to Turner's Mill in Oregon county; Ninangua River from the mouth of Bennett Springs Branch down to Keith Burns Ford in Dallas and Laclede counties; Meramec Springs Branch in Phelps county; Dry Creek from the mouth of Westover Springs Branch to its confluence with the Huzzah Creek in Crawford county.

PROBABLY NOT ALL trout fishermen will agree that a production increase of 30 per cent is enough to meet the demand of today's increased fishing pressure, but those of us who like to fish for trout in Missouri must take the overall viewpoint just as sportsmen do who are interested in other phases of outdoor activity. Outside of raising trout, our commission doesn't have much control over trout fishing, most of which is done inside the State Parks. These areas come under the control of the State Park Board which operates and manages them. Stream areas outside of the parks, which will always provide less fishing although there are some excellent trout caught, are managed by the commission.

THE DAILY LICENSE FEES within the parks has been raised from 25 cents to 50 cents this year in order to make the park trout fishing program more nearly self-sustaining and this is undoubtedly justified. As to an expansion of the hatcheries project, however, that is another matter. Expense for this expansion would have to come out of the hunting and fishing license fees paid by sportsmen all over the state, as no Federal aid funds are available for such projects. The best figure I can get is that we trout fishermen, enthusiastic though we may be, represent somewhere in the neighborhood of 2½ per cent of the holders of hunting and fishing licenses in the state. Many of us are also bass fishermen, quail hunters or duck hunters as well and maybe interested in anyone of a half dozen other field sports. So if we take about 2½ per cent of the total hunting and fishing license money and divide it by the number of other sports which we trout fishermen are interested in, we will arrive at a clear idea of what we can expect in the way of trout fishing unless we are willing to "up" the ante.

THERE IS ONE THING about trout fishing that gives us a break. It is about the only fish or game which we pursue in Missouri where you don't have to worry about such background factors as environment. When you raise a trout in a hatchery and deliberately plant him in a spring branch where he has a mighty good chance of being caught within the week, food and shelter are minor considerations. Well—even though I can't be there—here's wishing you fellows good weather and a full creel tomorrow, the first of March.

Telephone Call

By Christopher Billogg

YOU do not wish to call them early in the morning and risk the chance of waking them up. You hesitate to call them late in the evening for fear of getting them out of bed.

If you were to call her at home later in the morning the chances are you would find that she had set out for the grocery store or gone to town on a shopping expedition.

If you were to call him at the office you would be sure to be told that he is in conference, has stepped out for a moment, has gone to lunch, has not yet returned from lunch, is busy on another line, or has gone for the day.

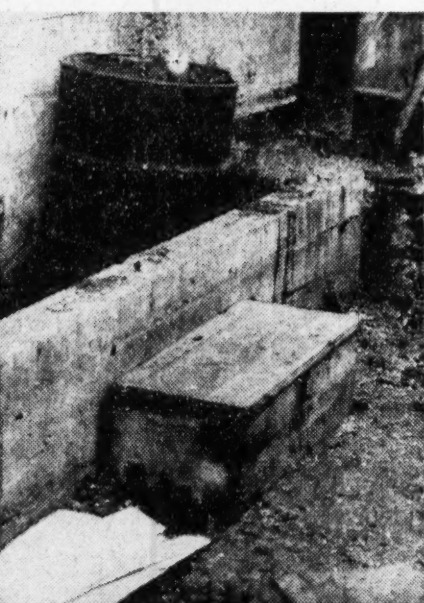

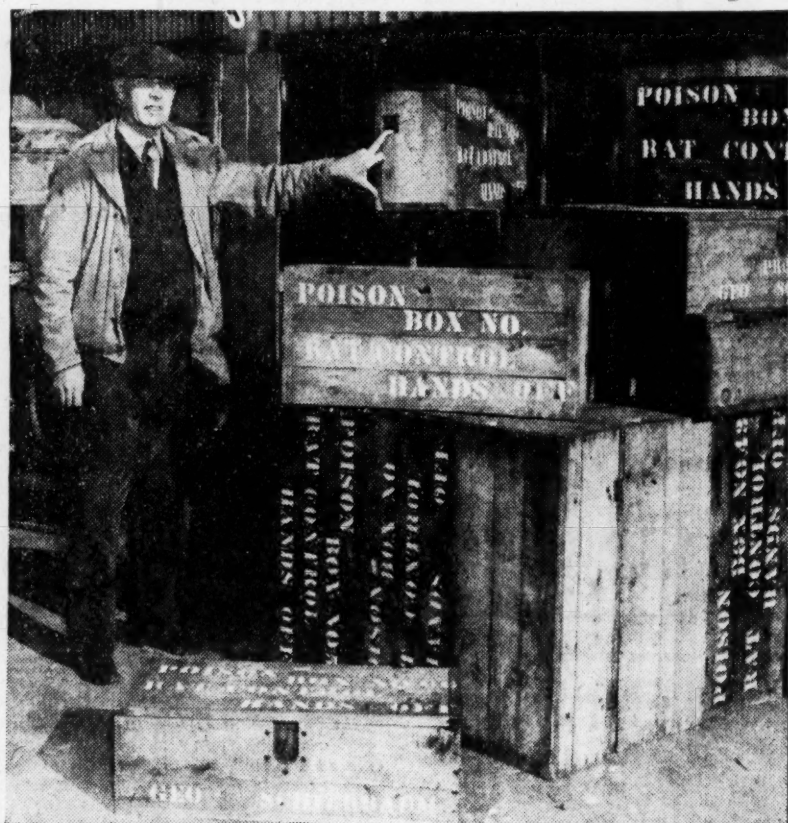

If you were to call her at home in the afternoon you may be sure that she is somewhere attending a meeting or has gone for a walk, or has dropped by to see a friend, or that this is the day her bridge club meets.

If you were to call them before dinner it is highly probable that they have not yet returned home or are taking a bath or are in some part of the house where they cannot hear the telephone.

By a process of elimination, it is, therefore, obvious that the best time in the day to call is immediately after dinner.

But since this is equally well known to the thousands of telephone users, and more especially to the family which shares a party line with you, it is hardly surprising that when you do try the call you almost invariably make the painful discovery that the line is busy.

How to Kill Rats Scientifically

A highly successful rat extermination program is under way at National Stockyards, where use is being made of the new ro-denticide, known as Chemical 1080. This poison, discovered during the war by the National Defense Research Committee, has a mysterious lure for rats and a small dose kills within seconds. Picture at top shows George Schierbaum, in charge of the program, with some of the boxes he uses to put out the poison. Extreme care must be exercised, as the chemical is fatal to other animals and to humans. Left, one of the boxes in position along an outside wall at the Hunter Packing Co. plant. Each box is labeled and numbered. Below, Sam Garner, Negro caretaker at a dump near the plant, with part of one night's catch.

LABOR WAR

Violence flared over a mile-square area in Philadelphia today, the second day of fighting between police and pickets at the plant of the General Electric Co., as police attempted to enforce a common pleas court injunction limiting picketing to ten persons every ten feet. The strikers have defied the injunction and resorted to mass picketing. Note the men at right falling to the ground.

BROADWAY

By WALTER WINCHELL

Broadway Confetti

MELOPERA "insiders" hope all is well with Dorothy Kirsten and her groom Edward Oakes. . . Mary Jane Shea, ballerina (formerly in "Oklahoma"), may marry a famed war correspondent when he is free. . . West 57th street is in stitches. Since a noted art collector bought "Hitler's personal belongings" from a con man. . . Yvonne De Salvo (the dancer who was hurt when two balconyites fell on her at the Strand Theater) is dancing again, although medics said she'd never. . . That Betty Hutton recording of "Doctor, Lawyer, Indian Chief" is now a collector's item. Betty's ad liberties (in the middle of the swift-tempo'd wordage) are allegedly why. . . Barbara Evans and her Sammy have atomized.

IS NEWARK getting another ayem gazette? . . . Choo-Choo Johnson (who should've shoved off with her child by now) told everyone at her farewell party that she'd renounced her United States citizenship when she becomes Mrs. Jose LaCerdia in Brazil. Barbara Hutton did that once and regretted it, dearie. . . G.I.s getting discharged at Fort Dix can't figure out why the Army would allow such unpleasant last tawths—if they ever hoped men would re-enlist. Dirty, unsanitary, etc. . . Horn-tooters and other jive musicians are screaming because the Feds have made things so tough. As a result, reefer prices have up'd. . . Bill Bojangles Robinson celebrates his sixtieth ann'y in show biz at his next engagement via the Zanzibar's new show, March 7. It will have 100 in the cast.

SUGAR IS SO TIGHT even the black market is short on it! Black marketeers are complaining that even they can't get sugar at any fee. That's fine. . . Add titters: A well-known radio actor was entered in the Dog Show (in the Miscellaneous Class) as a malemute. . . The son of a leading music row figure is begging for trouble—foolin' 'round The Other Fellow's Gal. That's the only way most chumps get hurt on Broadway.

FRIENDS ARE WORRYING about a muchly headlined war hero. Many are predicting he will wind up with a vacation in the Funny-Factory. . . Chas. Harrell, the radio director, is starting "The Harrell School for Failure" to teach successful people how to act civilly. . . Hollywood eyebrows are raised to the stratosphere because of the late dates between a famed married cinema siren and one of Babs Hutton's off-mentioned admirers. . . The Jerry Coopers (Martha Goldwaite) have decided to struggle together. His luck turned sour and he's one guy who doesn't rate it.

WONDER IF the producers of "The Spiral Staircase" know that one of Mary Roberts Rinehart's biggest selling mysteries was christened: "The Circular Staircase"? . . . Danny Rogers, currently at the 800 Club, is a big-time comic-dancer. He brings the cigar right back to where Ben Bernie had it—as his constant stooge. Danny's nice manner about him, besides his specialties, make you wish the producers would put him in a Broadway musical. . . Philippa Schuyler, 14-year-old musical prodigy (her dad is a Pittsburgh editor), has won first and second prizes given by the Detroit Symphony. Philippa's first prize-winning composition, "Manhattan Nocturne," will be played by that symphony at the Detroit Youth Festival soon. . . Milton Berle told a group at Reuben's that he isn't worth the $7500 the Carnival is paying him. What's that, a scoop, son?

"MURDER, Inc.," or a reasonable facsimile, is back in business in B'klyn. The sinful there are shaking down pushcart peddlers, guaranteeing "protection." How the mighty have tumbled! . . . The response to the Jack Benny letter campaign, "Why I don't Like Jack Benny," was so vulgar you prob'ly will not hear of a similar campaign in radio again. They say that even the winning letter had to be re-written for presentation over the air.

The Record Makers

By Charles Menees

SUPERLATIVE JAZZ singers Ella Fitzgerald and Louis Armstrong combine talents with Bob Haggart's band on a new Decca disc handicapped only because the commercial tunes have already passed the zenith of popularity. Ella lays the foundation on "You Won't Be Satisfied" and Louis follows with an interesting vocal improvisation and trumpet solo before a vocal duet ending. Louis leads out on "The Frim Fram Sauce." Ella joins in and Armstrong's trumpet carries the side to a jammed-out ending. Incidentally, Armstrong and Jimmy Lunceford have just divorced Decca, Louis returning to Victor, Lunceford inking with Majestic. Bing Crosby's "Personality" (Decca) retains a freshness, though it is slower and less ebullient than Johnny Mercer's version. Top kic's come from the way Joe Bushkin, Joe Dixon, Bill Davidson, Brad Gowans and the other Eddie Condon-led jazzmen accompany Bing. Flipover, with Trotter backing, is the ballad, "Would You?" from "Road to Utopia." The booby prize goes to Victor's "Personality" by Helen Carrol and The Satisfiers, who are an iota better on "Love Is So Terrific."

"PATIENCE AND FORTITUDE," novelty sensation based on that utterance by New York's ex-Mayor LaGuardia, is already available here in a pleasing Hal McIntyre cutting (Cosmo) and in a revival-like arrangement by the Andrews Sisters (Decca, paired with "Red River Valley"). Coming up from Columbia is Count Basie's "P.A.P." sung below par by Jimmy Rushing. Rushing, reported retiring, is at his best on blues. Reverse dusts of most of Basie's familiar piano tricks on "The Mad Boogie." Fine bass work on these sides is by Walter Page who has rejoined Basie. Dinah Shore continues to sound pleased with her new Columbia hookup on "Where Did You Learn to Love?" and "Coax Me a Little Bit," both with neat backing by Sonny Burke's all-star band. Run-of-the-mill singles: Kate Smith's "Seems Like Old Times" and "If I Had a Whirling Ring" (Columbia); Dick Haymes' "Do You Love Me?" and "As If I Didn't Have Enough on My Mind"; Violinist Jascha Heifetz' "Clair de Lune" and "Golliwog's Cake Walk"; Victor's Young's orchestra on "Cornish Rhapsody" (two parts), all Decca; Thelma Carpenter's "A Jug of Wine" and "Seems Like Old Times"; The Three Suns' "Do You Love Me?" and "I'm in Love With Two Sweethearts" (Majestic).

COLLECTOR'S CORNER: Back in 1942, Pianist King Cole, Tenor Lester Young and Bassist Red Callender cut four 12-inch sides for Norman Granz, just released in a new Philo album. Biggest thing desired is drumming. King Cole's block chord chorus highlights "Body and Soul" and Callender's chorus-long solo on "Tea for Two" deserves plaudits. Young's tenor work is groovy and tasty on these and on "I Can't Get Started" and "Indiana." Also available here are four swell Dixieland sides waxed for the Jump label by LaVerne's Chicago Loopers. Here is music that demands replaying. Tunes are "Can't We Talk It Over," "Blue Lou," "Exactly Like You" and "If I Had You." Soloists who spark sides are Clarinetist Matty Matlock, Guitarist George Van Epps, trumpets Chuck Mackey and Billy May, trombonists Floyd O'Brien and Joe Yuki and pianist LaVerne. Artie Shapiro's bass chorus on "Blue Lou" is especially praiseworthy. Nick Fatool presides at the drums.

Economical Menus for Tomorrow

By Meta Given

THE NAME Avocado Mousse may not be the correct one to give the food we describe below. It is not a dessert as most mousses are, but it is made like a mousse and it resembles one. It is most delicious when served over a fruit salad consisting chiefly of citrus fruit or tomatoes and the eye as well as the palate will respond with approval. In its role as a salad dressing, it should be served in molded form. It may also be used as a salad or appetizer. In some of the famous Swedish eating places one often sees on the smorgasbord tables something much like this, molded in ring form. One's appreciation of this mousse however, depends upon whether or not the partaker recognizes and enjoys both the rich and the bland flavor of this most unusual fruit. To make this mousse a winner, you must first be sure of the quality of your avocado.

If the fruit is hard and green or if it is so soft that the flesh has taken on a soft blackish brown color there is no use wasting time or effort in its preparation. For good eating, avocado must be soft enough to quickly mash up with a fork, and it should have a rich leaf green color from the skin down to the greenish yellow heart flesh. In this condition it responds to the seasoning of lemon and onion juice, salt and mayonnaise or cream. But go easy on the onion juice. Some cooks recommend the use of a little Worcestershire here but if that is preferred it should also be used with discretion or the flavor of avocado will be pushed out and overpowered. The aim should be to use just enough of the other seasoning to point up the avocado to its best advantage. When this is achieved avocado reaches a place in food preparation that it justly deserves.

Avocado Mousse.
Three medium, fully ripened avocados, one teaspoon plain gelatin, one-fourth cup cold water, two tablespoons lemon juice, one and one-half teaspoon onion juice, three-fourth teaspoon salt, three-fourth cup mayonnaise, three-fourth cup heavy cream, whipped; watercress, sliced oranges and grapefruit segments.

Don't attempt this mousse until you have high quality avocado with flesh ripened just to the right soft fleshy green stage. Soften gelatin in water for five minutes, then set in hot water to dissolve. Meanwhile puree the avocado (should be about 2 cups). Add next four ingredients. Add melted gelatin slowly, stirring constantly. Fold in cream and pour into 6-cup mold or individual molds, lined with cold water. Chill until firm. Unmold on watercress. Garnish with thick slices of orange and grapefruit segments. Six-eight servings.

Menus for Friday.
Breakfast—Stewed prunes, hot oatmeal, toast, jam.

Luncheon—Creamed brains with scrambled eggs, buttered green beans, melba toast, lemon sponge pudding.

Dinner—Hungarian goulash of beef, potatoes and onions, cooked cabbage wedges, carrotsticks, avocado mousse with sliced oranges and grapefruit blanc mange.

How It Started

Why Do We Say Learning "By Heart"?

DESCRIBING the process of memorizing as "learning by heart" may seem merely a schoolroom expression, taken over from the language of childhood. Actually the children have it from the source of much adult wisdom, for it is a saying which comes to us from the Bible.

In the good book, "heart" is frequently interchangeable with "mind" and "memory."

In Proverbs 4:4, for example, it is written: "Let thine heart retain my words."

Similarly, in Daniel 7:28, we find: "I kept the matter in my heart."

Hence learning "by heart" for committing to memory, one of the oldest metaphors in the English language. Its earliest recorded appearance is in "Troilus," by Chaucer, published in 1374.

My OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

Dear Martha Carr:

I AM 18, my husband is 19, and we have an eight-months' old baby. We have been separated for some time. The reason for it was a quarrel over his mother which ended in me putting him out of the house. Since then I have lived with her. He comes often to see the baby. For the last few weeks he keeps talking about us being together again, and for the sake of the baby that is what I would like too. But he hasn't done anything definite about it and I am losing patience. There is another man I know who wants to marry me, but I still love my husband very much. Do you think we should go back together again, and how can I make him make up his mind?

J. M.

Your husband is very young and is probably having a hard time to realize he is now supposedly adult and the head of a family. He appears to love his baby, so it seems to me that you could use the good of the child and its need of him to get him to return to you. Talk matters over frankly, see if you can't iron out whatever difficulties there were between you, persuade him to realize that once a couple has a child their lives are no more their own. They should be devoted to the welfare of that child. Each child is entitled to the security of a united home, to grow up enjoying the love of both parents. If you will forget this other man whom you don't care for particularly to begin with, if your husband will stop being sulky and stubborn, and you will both agree to make the necessary compromises and adjustments each married couple has to make in order to find happiness together, the two of you should be able to make a new start. Your husband's mother can contribute to the family peace and welfare by remaining as much in the background as possible and allowing you two to grow up and learn how to be managers of a little family all your own.

Dear Martha Carr:

I AM A FRESHMAN in high school. About a month ago my boy I like very much left the state and promised to write to me. As yet he hasn't even sent me a postcard. If I can get his address will it be all right for me to write him first? Several of the pupils at school know he is supposed to write to me and they ask me every day if I've received a letter, and this embarrasses me. Shall I tell them yes to shut them up? I was so sure this boy liked me, though he never did ask me out.

WAITING.

It is really no one else's concern whether this boy has written you, and I see no reason for you to feel you must lie to save your face. When asked about the matter simply say airily that you guess the boy has been too busy to think about writing, and you should worry. Then change the subject. He is the one who should write first, but boys generally aren't very fond of letter writing. Why worry about him? The school is full of other boys and one right here is lots more fun than a dozen who are miles away.

IN ANSWER TO letter about Albert: If you really like Albert, you'd better stop walking past houses where he is visiting, and running after him in general, and pay more attention to his actual invitations when he offers them. Give him time to ask you to go out again and go with him the next time, that is, if your age is such that your parents approve your having dates.

IN ANSWER TO "Mrs. M. G. M.": If removal of your possessions would not cause injury to the property you are renting, I am told there is no reason why you cannot take them with you. If you feel you will have any difficulty about it, consult the Free Legal Aid Bureau or a lawyer for legal advice.

CASE RECORDS

By Dr. George W. Crane

CASE J-224: Zola Z., age 47, used to be a headlined actress. "Now she takes a prominent role in the campaign to prevent medical schools from using dogs in their educational program," one of my medical colleagues reminded me. "Every year, almost like clockwork, she manages to break into newspaper headlines with some charge of brutality."

"She is one of the prize anti-vivisectionists, but I seriously wonder if she is really so interested in dogs. Doesn't she find that this devotion to canines is a stunt for getting into the spotlight again and thus raising some newspaper headlines? You know her, Dr. Crane, so what is your opinion?"

WHEN MEN OR WOMEN have been in the public eye for a number of years, they learn to lean upon accolades and newspaper headlines as a solace to their ego. Furthermore, they become so accustomed to being spotlighted that a habit develops, and they actually experience a constant hunger for attention. After they leave the stage because of wrinkles or bulging waist lines, they are like a dope addict who has been cut off from his narcotic. The latter may go completely haywire in his attempt to get some dope. And the actor or actress may engage in bizarre stunts to regain even a temporary spot in newspaper publicity.

FOR MORE THAN 10 YEARS I have known Zola. Her great devotion to dogs is a camouflage for her attempt to raise newspaper headlines. She has never been able to forget that she once performed in the spotlight. Even now, she flounces into a room with a twist of her hips and "stages" her entrance. Zola may have a normal fondness for animals, though I doubt it, for I have never seen her show much interest in her children. Zola's chief interest is Zola and newspaper headlines. She is employing her campaign against the use of dogs by medical schools as a means of breaking into print since she cannot do so under more legitimate methods.

SOME ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS are sincerely fond of dogs, and grow righteously indignant at the report of cruelty to animals. But medical schools are not addicted to cruelty when they employ animals. Any surgery is preceded by anesthesia, for doctors are human beings and dog lovers. Besides, skillful surgery demands quiet muscles, so the dogs MUST be anesthetized, despite the lurid tales of horror that are spread around by anti-vivisectionists.

Animals are essential for testing new surgical techniques. And all drugs must be standardized on animals, including even cod liver oil, plus morphine, etc. We likewise MUST use animals for getting vaccines. Don't let silly sentimentality or publicity stunts by antiquated actresses, becloud your logic and "horse sense."

School and Home Should Co-operate

By Angelo Patri

HOME is all the world to children, acutely present in the minds and hearts of the younger children, but always the dominant background in the thought and behavior of all children from the youngest to the oldest. No well-trained teacher will disregard home and its heads, its ways and the influence of those ways on its children.

The children who live in homes that are well set in the ways of this nation's life are bright spots in the teacher's day. They are the leaders, the inspiration of the class, but it is the others that the teacher will have to study and plan for. Every good teacher feels the responsibility resting upon him to train the untrained and send them out to be heads of families that will train their children in American ideals of work, thought and behavior.

TO DO THIS the teacher will have to enlist the aid of the parents of her pupils, all of them, the highly placed and the lowest and all between and if she can capture the interest and aid of the clergyman, the physician, the dentist, social workers, if any, so much the better for training children is a community task in which the teacher is always the leader.

The big group of almost any class in this country goes along with the teacher smoothly so there will be but a handful to receive special professional timely help. The first thing to do is to examine each child who does not measure up, even in a small way, to the standard. A slight fault at the start such as uncleanliness leads to grave behavior tendencies. Find what the conditions are behind that uncleanliness. Remember that no child likes being below standard in any way and when he knows that he is, and is helpless to change it, look out for trouble. Get to his aid quickly and effectively even if you have to supply the soap and water and towels yourself.

ONCE I VISITED a little school in the country and noticed that every child in the room was shining with cleanliness and goodwill. I asked my host how it happened that there was no child there without good clothes and good care. He showed me a big closet in the hall, like a little room with shelves all about it and there was a complete outfitting shop from shoes to caps, a fine medicine cabinet, everything necessary for the care of the children.

The teacher headed a parent-teacher group. The women met in the schoolhouse every week and sewed for the children, brought clothes new and worn, stocked that closet and kept it full. Once a month a big meeting was held when the twenty-four families sent representatives and the doctor and the minister reported. That was a school worth its costs. Home must help but the teacher must lead.

Apple Fritter

There's something awfully heartening about a well-made apple fritter, served with powdered sugar, if you have it. Use granulated sugar, otherwise. Let the apple slices stand for 30 minutes or so to absorb as much sugar as possible.

Mix and sift a cup of flour with a little salt and one and one-half teaspoons baking powder. Add, slowly, one-third cup of milk, a beaten egg and a suggestion of nutmeg and cinnamon. Dip the apple slices into this mixture and fry them in deep fat until they are amber-colored. Drain them on absorbent paper and sprinkle them with a little more sugar just before serving.

They're Making Other Children Happy

St. Louis Pupils Sending Gift Boxes Through Junior Red Cross

By Clarissa Start

THAT ordinary lead pencil which your young hopeful clutches and occasionally chews as he ponders the intricacies of long division, is a prosaic enough item in the American home. Its monetary value is seldom considered. To school children in foreign countries, however, a pencil is a priceless possession, a luxury which often brings a non-ceiling price of as high as $9. In France, the tablet of paper that goes with it has a black market value of $5. In Czechoslovakia both are so unobtainable that school children are working their sums by scratching with rocks on pieces of discarded shovels.

These facts of international arithmetic are being brought home to American school children and, more than that, they are doing something about it. Through the Junior Red Cross, they are sending boxes, 9x4x3-inch cardboard containers which hold pencils, paper, compasses, rulers, tooth brushes, soap, sewing equipment, and in spare corners, a few less practical but morale-lifting gifts such as hairbows and jumping ropes and rubber balls. The expense of the boxes and shipping costs are paid for by the National Children's Fund of the Junior Red Cross, but the articles themselves are purchased by the children with funds they have raised through their own initiative and ingenuity.

The Red Cross prefers that the children earn the money themselves rather than ask their parents for contributions," said Miss Margaret R. Aird, director of educational services for the St. Louis Chapter of Red Cross. "Also we like to stress that the boxes are not filled with leftovers but with really good things. Each box has an approximate value of $3 and of course, is worth much more in the countries to which the boxes are sent."

These educational boxes, 500,000 of which were given last year, have been sent annually since the Junior Red Cross first established by Woodrow Wilson in 1919, but until three years ago they were called Christmas boxes and were devoted principally to toys and dolls. After the outbreak of the second World War, the Latin American countries agreed to forego their shipments so all gift boxes could be sent to children in the war zones.

The attitude of the school children here, as we observed at the Mallinckrodt School, 6012 Pernod avenue, where a group of Miss Annabeth Brande's Junior Red Cross workers were packing boxes, seems to be one of happy but thoughtful sharing. The attitude of the children receiving the boxes can scarcely be described in words, as letters from those areas indicate. Children in Athens danced and sang when they received their first gifts. A teacher in Holland described the bedlam as "such a sound as I have never heard. They were wondering and enjoying at the same time."

This box packing is only one of the projects in the ambitious program maintained by the 18,000,000 American members of the Junior Red Cross. Another project along the same lines of international understanding is the making of scrapbooks and portfolios by school groups here which are exchanged for those made by schools in other countries, the purpose being to acquaint each group with the activities of the other. Two new portfolios had just arrived the day we visited the local office, one made by a school in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, containing everything from comic strips from their newspapers to a picture of Balmoral Castle and a spray of heather from Deeside. Another, made by school children in Bordeaux, France, was a beautifully written, watercolor illustrated book describing France under the Nazi occupation. The compositions told of the midnight visits of soldiers to take members of the children's families to concentration camps, of the fighting and the bombings, and finally the day of liberation when they lined the streets and threw flowers before American troops. The pictures were of goose-stepping Nazis, of sabotaged communication lines, of a bomb exploding.

In exchange for these there was a scrapbook made in Bonfils, Mo., with stories about Missouri farm life, paintings of the leaves of trees, and a list of prominent Missourians from President Truman to Mark Twain.

"We think these scrapbooks bring the children of one country closer to another," Miss Aird said. "These children can read about the other countries in their history books and their geographies but here it is in their own language. They may learn about World War II in their lessons but my guess is they'll remember much more from the stories of these French children."

In St. Louis, Junior Red Cross work is done in 543 schools including public, Catholic, Lutheran and private institutions. Miss Aird, the young, attractive and enthusiastic education director, is in charge of the program, assisted by Carrie Randolph in the city schools, Marie Josephine Carr in county schools, Vivian Rucker Jeffries, Negro schools, and Mary Virginia Ryan, Catholic and Lutheran schools. Each school decides on its own particular project, and there is some type of pattern with profit. Pronunciation, good but not infallible. During the broadcast checked for this article, he repeatedly mispronounced sacrifice as "SAK-ri-fiss" (sorry, Edward, one made by a school in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, containing everything from comic strips from their West opened the nine of clubs. East overtook with the ten and returned the spade jack. Declarer covered and West won. At this point it should have been completely obvious to West that East was begging for a spade ruff, otherwise there would have been utterly no point in the overtake at the first trick and the shift up to dummy's only apparent trick. However, though West was far removed from the novice class, he missed this implication. He could not be convinced that declarer had started with four spades, and therefore took the cursory view that East's lead of the spade had been a doubleton. Obsessed with the idea of shortening declarer in trumps, West returned a club. Declarer ruffed and cashed his three top hearts, finally conceding only the heart jack and a diamond, in addition to the two tricks already lost. Thus the vulnerable contract was fulfilled.

Obviously, had West given East credit for the slightest intelligence, he would have returned a spade. East would have ruffed and, as his best means of putting West back on lead, would have shifted immediately to a low diamond. Another ruff would have developed, for a 500-point penalty and an excellent match-point score instead of "bottom on the board."

store and gave him a long story about what they were doing and why they wanted the baseball. And, of course, the story ended happily. The baseball was marked down, coincidentally, to the exact amount that they could afford to spend."

My Day By Eleanor Roosevelt

NEW YORK, Wednesday.

EVERYONE living in this city awoke this morning with a sense of relief. They might so easily have awakened to a city tied up by a transit strike with every chance that, with the subways being run by inexperienced people, there might have been serious accidents. That threat has been removed, and I hope that, as citizens, we will all take a real interest in the special transit committee which the Mayor promised to appoint.

This committee will be charged with a very great responsibility. The public has an obligation to the workers in an essential industry to see to it that their legitimate grievances are given a fair hearing and that a just decision is reached as soon as possible.

LONG DELAYS over decisions, while the worker goes on working under conditions that he feels are unjust, take away his sense of obligation towards the public. This sense of obligation is required of public utility workers, for they provide things that are really essential to the life of the citizens as a whole, but in return the public has a real obligation to see that the worker does not suffer injustice and is not expected to give more than he receives.

I think full credit should be given to the CIO president, Philip Murray, and to Michael J. Quill, president of the Transport Workers' Union, for their willingness to compromise in the present situation. They have shown a regard for the public and a statesmanlike understanding of what a transit strike would mean to the people of this great city and to the work which they do. One may hope that this augurs a better future in the whole field of labor relations and that the same amount of understanding can be shown by union leaders and management as a whole.

I AM HAPPY to see that the United Nations Organization has found, at Hunter College's Bronx branch, a meeting place for the security council when it meets in New York in March. The difficulties that we create over housing U.N.O.'s groups are really quite funny!

There are a certain number of people, of course, who would rather not have the international organization's headquarters in this country. They still have not accepted the fact that we have a share in international affairs which we cannot escape. Or else they fear that, since we are going to house this organization, we may be expected to take more financial responsibility than would be our share if U.N.O. had its permanent home somewhere else.

I THINK it would be wise for us to make clear that our resources are available to U.N.O. for rehabilitation purposes as far as they will go and that we are willing to make them go as far as possible—but only if we see resources which mean peace in the future and increased well-being for the peoples of the world. It is essential, however, that we face the fact that our resources can be made to stretch, without deprivation to ourselves, if we will learn to waste far less than we have in the past and to forego some of the luxuries which we have grown to consider necessities. As to the question of a permanent home for U.N.O., there are which I would like to bring to some things to be considered your attention tomorrow.

What to Expect Tomorrow.

Sun in Places.
General Tendencies — You may drop your first and well-planned interests tomorrow and turn suddenly to something entirely new, this most apt to happen near midday. You should do well financially all during the morning and may think your luck will keep up, but watch your step after you make the changes, for the later ideas will not be as good. The evening may be all right for social affairs if you can stop thinking about that deal which did not click.

If Tomorrow Is Your Birthday.
It will be hard to settle upon a fixed course during the next 12 months; be prepared for unexpected upheavals all year. Toward October and November the money returns should pick up, so the entire interval will not be so bad, but it certainly will be different from what you anticipate at first. If getting married, watch out for changes of heart upon the part of your loved one, and remember that there are millions of others upon earth.

Tomorrow's Watchword—Words and phrases from tomorrow's topic. We all have our favorites. Here is one of mine, by William Blake, a great and vastly misunderstood man, trying to be articulate in both painting and poetry: "Bring me my bow of burning gold, bring me my arrows of desire! Bring me my spear! O clouds, unfold! Bring me my chariot of fire." These words give me a picture which my eyes cannot see and which only my soul can encompass.
